Night racing sought by track

by NANCY GOTLER

Arlington Park Race Track officials Thursday will ask the Illinois Racing Board to allow night harness racing at the track from Oct. 1 to Dec. 22.

The board will decide whether the dates, originally awarded to Washington Park, which was heavily damaged by fire Feb. 5, should be transferred to Arlington Park, be canceled or be assigned to another track.

Arlington Park officials refused to comment on the matter.

"WHATEVER I DO at the racing board will be discussed then and not before," said Joseph Joyce, Arlington Park president. Arlington and Washington parks are owned by Madison Square Garden Corp., New York.

But an informed source in the racing industry said William Thayer, vice president and general manager of Arlington Park, met with Madison Square Garden officials Monday in New York to discuss plans to bring night racing to Arlington Park.

Rolling Meadows City Atty. Donald Rose plans to attend the racing board meeting to formally oppose night racing on behalf of the city.

"I haven't heard from (City Mgr. Thomas) Palmer, but I'm sure he will ask me to attend and I plan to be there," Rose said.

A SPECIAL MEETING also has been called for tonight by race track officials to discuss "a subject of great importance" with representatives of five Arlington Heights homeowners associations.

Racing Board Chairman Lucy Reum said discussion of allocation of Washington Park's dates is on Thursday's agenda. The meeting will be held at 9:30 a.m. in the State of Illinois Building, 160 N. LaSalle St., Chicago.

Mrs. Reum said track officials either could run the dates at Arlington Park, give up the dates or enter a lease agreement with another track to run the season there.

"But before the dates would be transferred to Arlington Park," she said, "they would have to convert the racing strip to harness by adding limestone, winterize the barns and grandstand and have the approval of the village."

SHE HAD NO estimate of the cost to preparing the thoroughbred track for harness racing.

"I'm not sure that we legally have to respond to the village on the question of night racing," Mrs. Reum said, "but in the interest of racing I think we should. We don't want to contradict the majority opinion of the

Reactions vary to death penalty law

The specter of death again shadows criminals in Illinois.

Gov. James R. Thompson Tuesday signed the controversial law that brings back to the state the authority to execute certain criminals, a power that had been closeted since Aug. 24, 1962 when the last death-for-murder was carried out in Cook County Jail.

The law will have as much of an impact on those within the criminal justice system as it will on the convicted murderers who will face it. And many who will arrest, try, defend and sentence still disagree on the merits of the ultimate punishment.

'It won't deter crime'

Criminal Court Judge William Cousins: "You look at states like North Carolina where the death rows are full. More and more persons are committing serious crimes there every day." The former black alderman from Chicago does not see the death penalty becoming a deterrant to crime. It probably will discriminate against minorities and the poor, howevr, he said.

"Remember that the law is only as adequate as the people who carry it out. It's one thing to have alaw. It's another to have it fairly applied.

"I am bound to carry out the law. If a case is such that according to the law a person is to be sentenced to death, then so be it."

'Something must be done'

Criminal Court Judge Francis J. Mahon: "I do consider it a deterrant. If you saw what we have in court, you'd find out how cheap life is. I've seen people murder for $10 or even nothing.

"Something has to be done for justice. Life has become so cheap with people killing for nothing. They might think twice if they thought they might get the death penalty."

'Society has the right'

Criminal Court Judge Fred G. Suria: "I believe it will be a deterrant. I've had premeditated murder cases in here in which the person thought that if they could kill the witnesses to a crime, they'd be free. Now they'll think twice.

"I do have reservations, but with my Catholic upbringing I believe that you have the right to kill someone in self defense. Society collectively has the right to kill in self defense, too. I don't think that with the death penalty society will turn around, but now a person who commits a premeditated murder will realize that by taking a life he may lose his own."

'Can be applied fairly'

Criminal Court Judge Brian B. Duff: "The only problems with it in LIKE MANY OF the residents near Arlington Park Race Track, Wayne Mikos, 809 N. Wilke Rd., Arlington Heights, is concerned about a traffic increase that may result from night racing at the track.

Residents mostly 'nay' on track plan

Herald staff report

"I'm definitely opposed to it," Millicent Braiske, 2310 Fremont St., Rolling Meadows, said of plans to hold night harness racing at Arlington Park Race Track. "Daytime racing is more than sufficient."

Like many of the residents along Fremont street, a residential area that runs parallel to the main stretch of the race track, Mrs. Braiske objects to the noise, traffic and lights that may be generated by night racing.

Wayne Mikos, 809 N. Wilke Rd., Arlington Heights, who lives across from the track, said he would worry most about the traffic night racing would bring into the area.

"THE ONLY REASON I'd be opposed is because of the traffic," he said. "I work nights so the crowd and lights wouldn't bother me. The only concern I have is the traffic."

"I think it's no good," Mrs. Joseph Rybarczyk, 2400 Fremont St., Rolling Meadows, said of the propssal. "My husband will never be able to get home from the train (because of increased traffic.)"

Mrs. G. Elliott, 2404 Fremont St., Rolling Meadows, said the lights shining from the track into their back yard would be a nuisance.

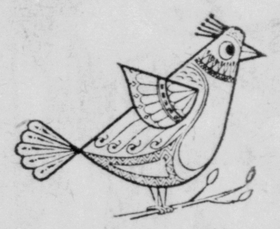

"The last time they tried this it was just too much," she said. "The lights bothered us because they shined into the bedroom. It gets just like daylight."

LOUISE HANNEMAN, 2410 Fremont St., Rolling Meadows, said noise would be the major problem with night racing.

"We live in such a nice town and we love it here," she said. "We put up with it during the day but I wish they wouldn't have it at night."

However, other residents living

Slain heiress' estate to be auctioned today

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Everything from her gold inlaid false teeth to her famous garbage cans go on sale today in the auction of the goods of slain grocery store heiress Marjorie Jackson.

The property offered for sale includes a 1977 Cadillac she stopped driving because the windshield wiper came on unexpectedly, more than 40 Bibles, hundreds of glass and porcelain knickknacks, Oriental rugs, jewelry, furs and some brand-new clothes with her nametag in them.

Mrs. Jackson, the widow of the former president of the Standard Food Store chain, was found shot to death in her burning stone ranchhouse May 7. Police found more than $5 million in cash in the house and believe an equal amount was carried off by the burglars who left her to bleed to death.

EARL CORNWELL, the auctioneer who will handle the sale with three assistants, said Tuesday he expects people will pay good prices for dresser drawers in which part of the $5 million in the house was found and garbage cans of the type that contained $2 million.

Cornwell's auction house was piled high Tuesday with personal effects of Mrs. Jackson and from the estate of her mother.

Cornwell said the attendance might top 60,000, which he said would be a new world's record.

On sale is a burglar alarm found on a table with bottles of perfume, piano sheet music and a box containing several dozen new tooth brushes.

The alarm is smaller than a pack of cigarettes. It uses two penlight batteries and also contains a flashlight, operating as an alarm by being fastened to a door and having a strap attached to the door jam. An intruder opening the door would set it off.

"Obviously," said Cornwell, "it was not used."

Another carton contained several large boxes of caps for a toy gun with which the recluse heiress hoped to frighten intruders.

TM teacher gets a lift from explaining levitation

by JOHN LAMPINEN

Steve Schulte does not raise an eyebrow when he says it is possible to become invisible.

When he says a person can levitate himself, he says it as casually as if he was observing that the corner meat market closes at 6 p.m.

He has never vanished into thin air or lifted himself off the ground, but he believes these things. They are real, he says. They are happening, he says. He doesn't question them.

Yet Schulte is not surprised when some people do.

HE IS SURE, HE says, that the Wright brothers had a number of skeptics when they were building planes at the turn of the century.

"All through history," Schulte observes, "some people have met scientific breakthroughs with resistence."

People may be skeptical now, he says, but in a few years they will know. And others, he adds, do not find talk of levitation and invisibility so shocking.

"The most creative people just accept it, that there must be more to life," Schulte says.

One of those people is Jonathan Shear, head of the department of philosophy at Maharishi International University in Fairfield, Iowa.

He will speak tonight at 7:30 at the Sheraton Inn-Walden, 1725 E. Algonquin Rd., Schaumburg, about the fuller use of human potential. Admission is $3 for adults and $2 for students.

ONE OF THE TOPICS Shear will discuss, but not demonstrate, is invisibility and levitation, but Schulte is not overly fascinated with those topics.

He teaches transcendental meditation at the Arlington Heights World Plan Center, and he lives in a world where words like "consciousness" and "enlightenment" and "full potential" and "siddhis" abound.

When someone persists in talking about flying and disappearing, he tries hard to withhold a laugh. It is not that those subjects bore him.

"It's a great breakthrough in science," Schulte says. "It's just an incredible breakthrough in human development."

THOSE THINGS are important; but

Alleged Anderson killer in contempt of court

The accused murderer of Buffalo Grove resident Phyllis Anderson was cited for contempt of court Tuesday and sentenced to six months in jail.

Marion Logan, 30, of Chicago disregarded Cook County Circuit Judge James Bailey's order to return to the judge's bench after Logan kissed his girlfriend and began to walk out of the courtroom in the Criminals Courts Building, 26th Street and California Avenue, Chicago.

Logan apparently was angered after Bailey refused to set bond for him. Logan remains in custody at Cook County Jail.

The suspect was apprehended by sheriff's deputies who escorted him back to the judge, who then slapped on the sentence.

Logan was arrested by Chicago police June 14, 1976, the day after he allegedly fired a .45-caliber handgun three times through the back window of the Anderson auto, killing Mrs. Anderson and wounding her husband, Leo, in the neck.

The Andersons, of 986 Cambridge Dr., were returning from an eighth grade graduation party in Lansing when a heavy rain storm forced them off the Dan Ryan expressway into an unfamiliar area on Chicago's South Side.

At 69th Street and S. Harvard Avenue, the Andersons were beset by a gang demanding $10 to pull the car from a flooded underpass. After Anderson refused to pay, a person broke the window and shots were fired into the crowded car.

'AFBBB' sex show fools hearing

CLEVELAND (UPI) — The director of the Great Lakes Shakespeare Festival told a joint City Council hearing Tuesday on a proposed new anti-smut ordinance that "you cannot legislate the use of the human body on stage.

"There is no shortcut to good taste . . . It's the motive, not the deed, which should be considered," Vincent Dowling said.

Burlesque dancers were expected to testify at the council hearing but City Council President George Forbes said it was just a rumor he started.

FORBES SAID he had been joking in inviting strip dancers to testify, and none came. The rumor brought a large turnout of reporters and onlookers.

"I've had trouble with the girls' union," he added, tongue-in-cheek, "The AFBBB — the American Federation of Bare Bosoms and Bottoms.

"I've been putting this town on for two weeks," he said to reporters. "The media thought there was going to be a sex show here today. You bought it hook, line and sinker."

Attorney Bernard Berkman, who often represents defendants in obscenity and First Amendment cases, said the proposal from the administration of Mayor Ralph Perk would be found unconstitutional if enacted.

THE LAW, which the mayor strongly supports and Forbes strongly resists, would add mandatory fines of not less than $500 and jail terms of not less than 30 days to the city's present obscenity ordinance.

It also would ban nude dancing and certain types of sexual conduct, including breast feeding in public and public nudity — whether obscene or not.

Assistant City Law Director Bruce Taylor, who helped design the law, said it was an attempt to bring the city ordinance in line with the state code and U.S. Supreme Court guidelines.

Also, he said, it was to make penalties more severe on owners convicted of pandering obscenity than on performers convicted of being obscene.

NUDE BURLESQUE dancing, he said under heavy questioning by Forbes, would be prohibited "because she's naked, whether or not it's obscene."

"I'm trying to find the rationale that art must be clothed," Forbes shot back.

Berkman said that "what is not obscene cannot be prohibited." Only "sexual conduct of a hardcore nature," he said, has been found obscene by law.

He protested the approach that entertainment and literature must be suitable for children.

"Just as we regulate the sale of cigarets to minors," he said, "the community must not be restricted to what is acceptable to children."

Man, 19, believed drowned in lake

A 19-year-old man is believed to have drowned late Tuesday night in Belleau Lake in the Cook County Forest Preserve near Des Plaines. Divers from several Northwest suburban fire departments tried to locate the body but were forced to call off the search because of darkness. The search is expected to continue today. Police said a car, boots and wallet of the missing person were found about 10 p.m. near the shore. Departments responding Tuesday were from Mount Prospect, Wheeling, Glenview, Elk Grove Village and Des Plaines. Officials asked divers to return to the scene at 8 a.m. today to continue the search. Identification of the man was withheld by authorities pending notification of next of kin. The drowning would be the second in Belleau Lake in less than a week.

Flood intoxication case delayed

A preliminary hearing in the second drunken driving case against John J. Flood has been continued to 11 a.m. Aug. 16 in the Arlington Heights branch of the Cook County Circuit Court. Flood, 36-year-old president of the Combined Counties Police Assn., appeared in court briefly Tuesday morning on charges of driving while intoxicated, improper lane usage, refusing to take a breathalizer test, battery, and speeding. The continuance was requested by James Simpson, Flood's attorney. The CCPA president was arrested May 8 in Buffalo Grove after his car was clocked by police radar going 43 miles an hour in a 35-mile-per-hour zone. Flood was charged with battery after he allegedly grabbed Buffalo Grove Sgt. Peter Lippert by the neck and began to choke him.

Flood's attorneys are filing an appeal against a recent Lake County court trial which found the CCPA president guilty of drunken driving Oct. 6 in Mundelein.

Defense takes its turn in Columbo trial

After 22 days of testimony by 50 witnesses, and the presentation of 219 items of evidence, prosecutors Tuesday rested their case against accused killers Patricia Columbo and Frank DeLuca.

Defense attorneys today will launch their counteroffensive, an attempt to tear down what the state has built up in court.

The sequestered jury could begin deliberations on the fate of Miss Columbo, 21, and DeLuca, 39, as early as next week.

Miss Columbo and DeLuca are being tried in Cook County Circuit Court for the May 4, 1976 slayings of Miss Columbo's parents, Frank and Mary Columbo, and her brother Michael, 13, of 55 E. Brantwood Dr., Elk Grove Village.

MISS COLUMBO and DeLuca each are charged with murder and conspiracy and solicitation to commit murder.

Patricia Columbo

"It's like trying not one, but six cases," Judge R. Eugene Pincham has observed.

In a presentation laced with tales of perverse sex and violence, Cook County assistant state's attorneys called the 50 witnesses in an attempt to prove the charges against the defendants.

Testimony alleged:

• Miss Columbo had sex in lieu of front money with two self-professed "hit men," Lanyon R. Mitchell, 25, of Lake Villa, and Roman Sobczynski, 34, of 34 Glenbrook Dr., Prospect Heights.

• DeLuca told three persons the grisly details of how he carried out the slayings: Hubert Green, 28, of 122 Boardwalk Ave., Elk Grove Village; Joy Heysek, 37, of Hoffman Estates; and Clifford X. Childs, 29, of Chicago. All three have testified against DeLuca. Green and Miss Heysek once worked with DeLuca at a Walgreen's Drug Store in the Grove Mall, Elk Grove Village.

The three witnesses said DeLuca overlooked a crucial flaw in his "perfect plan" for murder: DeLuca talked too much.

• After their arrests, Miss Columbo and DeLuca admitted to police they had knowledge of the murder conspiracy. Miss Columbo said Mitchell and Sobczynski forced her to help them plot the killings.

• DeLuca, while awaiting trial, solicited Childs, his cellmate at Cook County Jail, to murder Green and Heysek.

• Miss Columbo received a "vision," in which she told police she saw herself participate in the murders.

Defense attorneys, in cross-examining the witnesses, tried to undercut their truthfulness by exposing every dark corner in key witness' pasts.

THEY TRIED TO show Mitchell to be a chronic liar; Childs, a former heroin dealer who made a deal with the state to testify in exchange for a promise of leniency on three armed robbery charges.

Mrs. Heysek they held up as the married mother of two children who was DeLuca's mistress between 1970 and 1973. She admitted she posed for pornographic photographs for DeLuca. DeLuca's attorneys said she would do anything to retrieve those photographs.

In Tuesday's action, Pincham ruled the state could not enter into evidence a will that showed Miss Columbo's brother stood to inherit the bulk of the family's estate while she was to receive only $5,000.

Pincham said he barred the will, valued at more than $10,000, because the state did not show that Miss Columbo knew its terms.

LAURENCE ACKER, Cook County assistant public defender for Miss Columbo, gave a preview of his client's defense Tuesday when he requested a directed verdict of innocence from Pincham.

Acker said no eyewitness or physical evidence linked Miss Columbo to the murders. He said prosecutors failed to prove Miss Columbo even was in Elk Grove Village the night of the killings.

He said the only substantial piece of information the state presented in its attempt to link Miss Columbo with the killings was her "vision" statement.

He said testimony by evidence experts "reveals nothing more than pure conjecture . . . It's reasonable to say this evidence is inconclusive."

PINCHAM DENIED Acker's motion, clearing the way for the defense to launch its case at 11 a.m. today. The first defense witness will be Clifford Jackson, a man who DeLuca's defense attorneys say will discredit Childs' testimony against DeLuca. Jackson also is imprisoned at Cook County Jail, Chicago.

Haldeman goes to jail; Mitchell deadline is noon

by United Press International

H. R. Haldeman went to jail Tuesday for his role in Watergate. John Mitchell has until noon today to surrender to U. S. marshals — the last man convicted in the scandal to go to prision.

Haldeman, 50, chief of staff in Richard Nixon's White House, walked into the administration building at the federal prison camp in Lompoc, Calif., gave his name and the process of fingerprinting and photographing began.

Mitchell, 63, Nixon's attorney general and campaign manager, will enter the federal prison camp at Maxwell AFB, Ala. He will be the first attorney general in American history to go to jail.

MITCHELL WAS NOT heard from Tuesday. He was believed to be putting his affairs in order at his New York City home.

Haldeman and Mitchell face sentences of 30 months to eight years for conspiracy, obstruction of justice and perjury. They could make their first application for parole about the end of next summer.

Both prison camps are minimum security facilities that have no fences.

The prison that will house Haldeman for at least 2½ years, is regarded as a "country club," among federal prisons.

SEVERAL OTHER Watergate figures have served time here. Haldeman will have a work assignment that could range from grass cutting to serving food, but he will have his evenings free to work on the book about Watergate he said would "cover everything."

Haldeman will share a dormitory unit with about 30 other prisoners who have no history of violence and no firearms or sex offenses in their records.

He will have a private cubicle in one of the two three-story concrete buildings originally built for Army barracks.

There are other buildings in the complex that spreads over about 40,000 acres, including the large farm. There is a chapel, a gymnasium, a dining hall and a recreational facilities building.

The prison camp is part of a compound that includes a medium security prison about a half-mile away. The whole facility is in the Inez Valley where the major industry is growing flowers beside farm lands and forests of pine in the hills to the north.

Haldeman's cubicle may overlook the spacious grounds, well-manicured lawns with picnic tables, a ballfield and a tennis court.

There is a weedy football field, handball, bocci and volleyball courts and a jogging track.

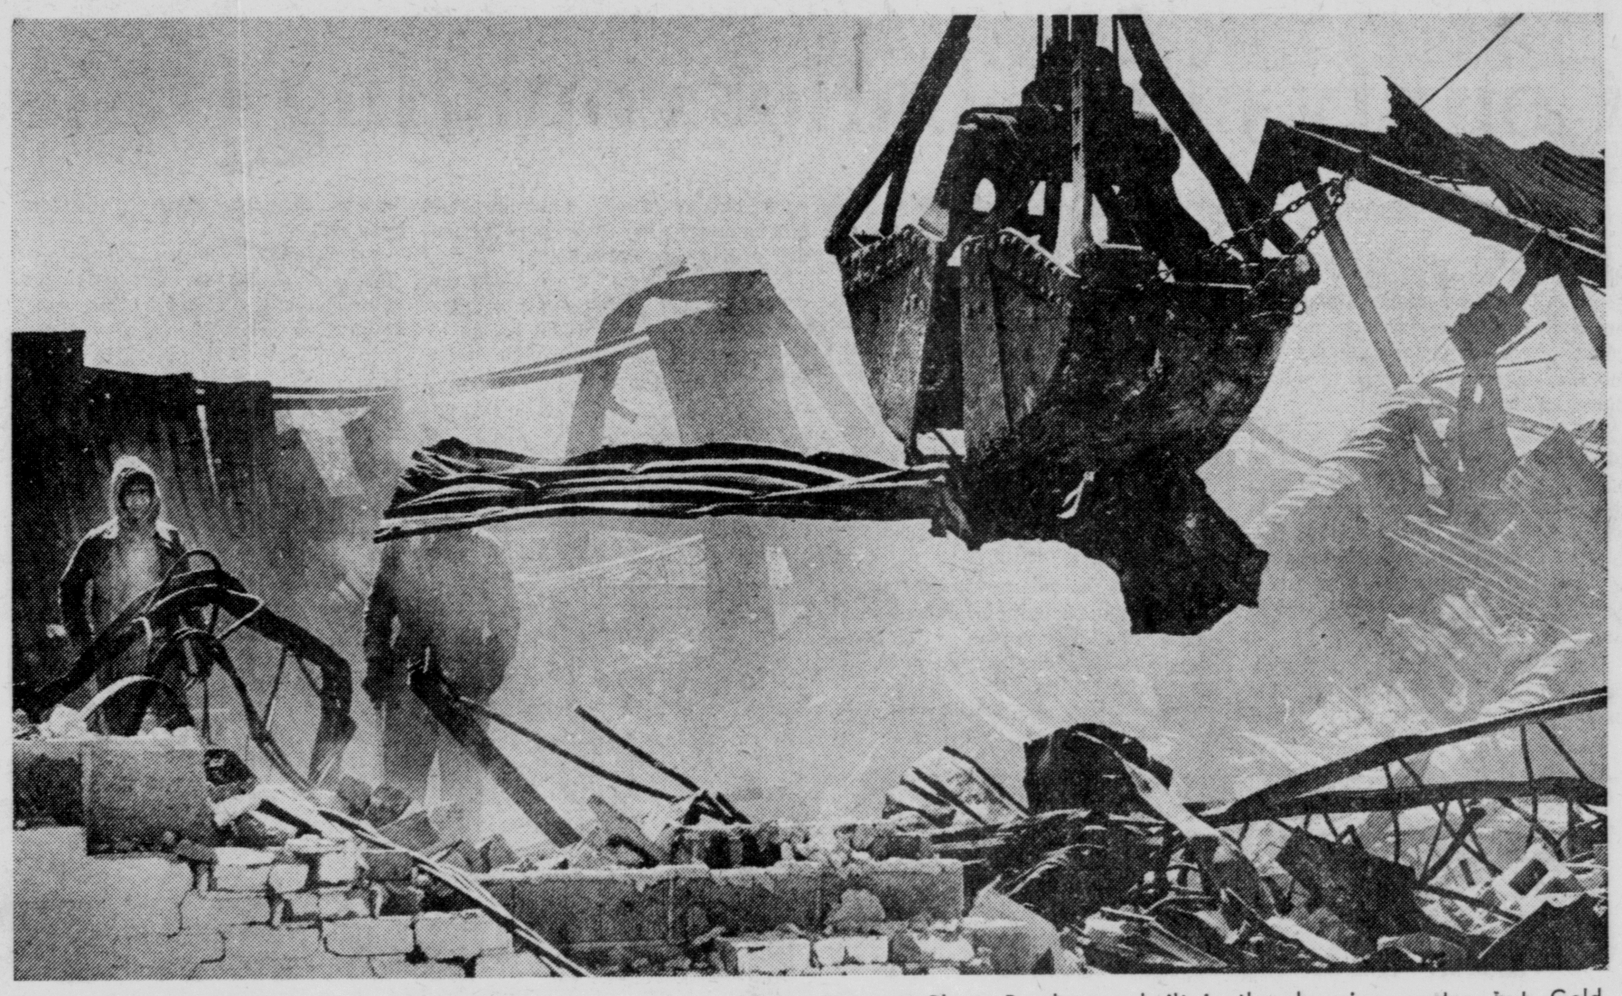

VISITING PERIODS for family and friends are generous compared to other prisons. Family and established friends can drop in on Monday, Thursday or Friday afternoons and all day Saturday and Sunday.

The correctional officers — they're not called "guards" — wear civilian clothes, not uniforms. They do not carry arms.

It is one of 11 federal minimum security facilities nationwide.

Only a few of the prisoners are actually white collar types such as Haldeman. More than half are drug offenders and another large percentage are illegal Mexican aliens who serve short terms for immigration violations. They account for most of the "walk-aways" each month.

John Dean, Nixon's counsel, spent some time here, as did Donald Segretti of "dirty tricks" fame. He spent his sentence sanding and assembling furniture. Herbert Porter Jr., the scheduling director for the Nixon reelection campaign and Herbert Kalmbach who worked on a surveying and construction crew, were here.

A DEMOLITION CREW from the Cleveland Wrecking Co., Chicago, Tuesday began razing the remains of Goldblatt's. The department store, in Mount Prospect Plaza, Rand and Central roads, was gutted by fire in February. It is unlikely the store will be rebuilt in the shopping center but Goldblatt's officials said they are considering other vacant sites in Mount Prospect for relocation.

Merits of death penalty debated the past couple years have been Supreme Court decisions. That legislature has had enough votes for it for the last four years.

"It can be applied fairly in my courtroom. If I can't carry out the law, I shouldn't be a judge, should I?"

'It will be a deterrant'

Assistant public defender Tom Murphy: "I'm for it. That may sound unusual from a public defender. I definitely think it will be (a deterrant) because a lot of the people who are repeat offenders know or think they know what they can get out of a judge.

"I definitely think it will be a deterrant to these people. I've never defended an accused murderer. I've handled mostly armed robbery. But even in situations like that you run into the people who know what they can do. To them, it's nothing to go out and steal something."

'There will be appeals'

Assistant state's attorney Barry Gross: "In the appropriate case the attorneys will ask for the death penalty. It will have a further effect on our office in that once the death penalty is given, there will be more appeals and delays and not as swift justice as there has been."

'An awesome weapon'

State Rep. Roman Kosinski, D-Chicago, author of the bill: "I think it will create fear and in all my days I have found fear is a deterrant." He said the law gives police and jurists "an awesome weapon to fight the crime of murder" and that it is "now up to them to come to our defense."

'Won't end violence'

State Rep. Robert Mann, D-Chicago, an opponent of the bill: The law is "a throwback to the dark ages. The people want an end to violence, they do not want to fry people. I don't think this will be an end to the violence."

'It will deter crime'

Schaumburg Police Chief Martin Conroy: "As a law enforcement officer for 31 years, I've always felt that the death penalty would be a deterrant to those persons who willfully take the life of another." He said it will be "a mockery of our justice system" if the law is never used.

GOV. JAMES THOMPSON reflects on the Death Penalty Bill he just signed. The bill was sponsored by Roman Kosinski.

Accord brings jet down to London

When the plane took off from O'Hare Airport Tuesday, most of the passengers on Trans World Airlines flight 770 didn't know whether they would land in Paris or London.

It turned out to be London thanks to a last minute agreement between the United States and Britain, over aviation rights that cleared the way for the plane to land in London. If the agreement hadn't been reached, the plane would have flown to Paris and the passengers transferred to a non-American flight for the last leg of the trip. Details of the agreement were unavailable late Tuesday.

The crisis began a year ago when Britain announced it would renounce a 30-year-old treaty setting aviation rights between the two nations. Negotiations had been under way for six months.

Airlines spokesmen said they made arrangements for the change in routes earlier this week, hoping they wouldn't have to use them. TWA passengers arriving in Paris were to be transferred to a non-American airline, probably Air France, for the final leg of the journey.

MANY OF THE passengers boarding TWA flight 770 Tuesday were unaware that they might have to make a detour to Paris, but most were unperturbed by the news.

"It doesn't bother me," said Shirley Clawsen of Columbus, Ohio. "I've never been to Paris so I wouldn't mind a bit."

Pat Gerardin of California, wife of a TWA employe, knew about the possible Paris detour and made plans just in case. "We have some friends there, and we may meet them for dinner if that happens. That would be very nice," she said.

And an elderly couple from Walsall, England, was concerned about the people meeting them in London. "Oh dearie," said Noreen Dilock when she heard the news. "This really worries me because I have an elderly sister who's 83 and she gets a little muddled. If the plane is delayed, I'm sure she'll have the hymns all picked out for the funeral."

PAN AMERICAN World Airways had arranged for its London flights to land in Brussels or Amsterdam, and its Hong Kong flights to go to Taiwan. National Airlines joined TWA in diverting London flights to Paris.

British Airways said its flights to most U.S. cities would be shifted to Toronto or Montreal, while its Miami flights would go to Nassau, The Bahamas.

Deep philosophical differences underlay the dispute, with Britain wanting more government control over routes and seating capacity, while the U.S. wants more free enterprise.

Law signing no joy for governor

SPRINGFIELD — The flair of the signature and the glare of television's bright lights were present, but the normal air of joy that accompanies legislative victories was absent Tuesday as Gov. James R. Thompson afixed his signature to the state's new death penalty.

Thompson leafed through the legislation, asking only what the correct date was, before he signed the bill at 11:11 a.m., making it possible for the state to put its first criminal to death since 1962.

"It is a very sobering experience," Thompson said after signing. He recounted during his days as a prosecutor and law professor that he represented both the state and the defense in appeal hearings on capital punishment cases.

THE GOVERNOR, who called for a new death penalty during his campaign, expressed his hope it would be a deterrent, but he was quick to say it is not a magic answer.

"It will not deter the crimes of passion, but it may deter the person who wants to commit a calculated murder," Thompson said.

Thompson was quick to defend the return of what he termed the "ultimate penalty."

"I would rather be able to use the word "tragedy" when describing the sentencing of a criminal to death than to describe the death of an innocent victim," he said.

He also stressed that he approached the question of reimposing the death penalty with caution, noting that he wanted the legislation limited to certain serious crimes.

THE LAW will authorize the sentence of death only in cases involving the murder of police officers and prison guards', contract killings, and murders committed during other felonies.

Thompson said he is braced for a court challenge to the new law.

"This meets the current standards set down by the United States Supreme Court, and I think it will withstand the challenge," he said.

"These are harsh words, but I would trade the life of one criminal for the life of one innocent person if it will save one," he added.

Suit filed against investment firm

by TONI GINNETTI

Illinois authorities have moved to halt an accused murderer's investment business which has allegedly bilked hundreds of persons in Chicago and the suburbs out of more than $200,000.

Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott Monday filed suit against George Luis Lamar and his wife, Christine, owners of Chicago American Investment Inc., a Melrose Park firm which allegedly took money from hundreds of persons promising to invest it for them for a guaranteed monthly return.

The action against Lamar came in the wake of his arrest last Wednesday for the murder of a Chicago man last October. Donald Mulack, head of Scott's consumer fraud division, Tuesday said Lamar had been at large since the murder and apparently began the phony investment company during that time.

MULACK SAID Lamar operated the business at 10405 Diversey Ave., Melrose Park, obtaining more than $200,000 from Spanish-speaking persons in the city and suburbs.

Lamar, who also used the name Al Rodriguez, promised those persons he would invest their money for a 10 per cent monthly rate of return that would bring them a cumulative return of 120 per cent in a year, Mulack said.

Instead, Lamar allegedly put the money in personal accounts in seven suburban banks using several aliases, Mulack said.

Such an operation is known as a Ponzi scheme, named for Charles A. Ponzi, who defrauded hundreds of investors in the 1920s through phony promises of "guaranteed" returns.

MULACK SAID Lamar told the investors he was "bonded for $1 million by the state" and in some cases collected thousands of dollars from unsuspecting persons.

"People gave $5,000, $7,000, $6,000, $2,000 and many gave hundreds," Mulack said. "One man gave his life savings of $25,000."

Lamar was arrested last Wednesday at his home at 3010 N. Mannheim Rd., Franklin Park, and charged with the Oct. 20, 1976, murder of Leono Perez of Chicago. Chicago Area 5 Homicide Lt. Joseph Mahoney said Perez, a narcotics-connected figure who was shot at the Harris Restaurant in Chicago, knew Lamar but he added police had not established a motive in the shooting.

Lamar is being held in Cook County Jail in lieu of $150,000 bond and is to appear in court June 30.

Mahoney said Lamar reportedly also has been under investigation in Dade County, Fla., in connection with another alleged fraud scheme.

MULACK SAID the money Lamar collected here was placed in seven banks, including the Melrose Park National Bank, the First National Bank of West Chicago, the First State Bank and Trust Co. of Hanover Park, the Bank of Bellwood, the Maywood-Proviso State Bank and the Northlake Bank.

A temporary restraining order allowing the attorney general to freeze the accounts was granted late Monday by Cook County Circuit Court Judge John F. Hechinger following the filing of Scott's suit, Mulack said.

However, only $28,000 remains in the accounts, he said.

Mulack said the alleged scheme is similar to the Teltronics Ltd. watch sale fraud in which Dennis L. Roberts, owner of the Des Plaines-based company, solicited money purporting to sell watches. Roberts instead deposited the money in personal accounts.

Roberts has been convicted by a federal court of mail fraud in connection with the scheme.

Mulack said authorities are conducting a criminal investigation into Lamar's business to determine if state securities laws have been violated. He said more persons are expected to be named soon in connection with the investigation.

County clerk ballot counting OKd

by STEVE BROWN

SPRINGFIELD — Despite earlier defeats and strong Republican objections, Illinois House Democrats amended legislation Tuesday to allow county clerks to count absentee ballots that cannot be delivered to polling places on time.

The legislation, which has been debated several times this session, is an outgrowth of the contested election in the 10th Congressional District in which U.S. Rep. Abner J. Mikva, D-10th, defeated Republican Samuel H. Young by 201 votes last November. Nearly 3,000 ballots went uncounted in that race.

Democrats and Republicans have been fighting to change the absentee ballot law and the GOP proposal that allows township clerks to count the ballots had cleared an Illinois House committee but was beaten on the floor.

THE SUCCESSFUL Democratic move will give County Clerk Stanley T. Kusper the authority to count absentee ballots at a central location if he receives future ballots before the polls close but too late to deliver to polling places.

Before the debate began, State Rep. Alan Greiman, D-Skokie, termed the GOP opposition "dumb."

"Most of the ballots we are talking about would be Republican ballots. I would think they would go for anything that would allow them to be counted," he said.

Greiman said he feared too much vote fraud might exist if the township officials were allowed to count the undeliverable absentee ballots.

"There is just too much room for the township supervisors to play games. I think they would all go to jail if the Republican bill went through," Greiman said.

STATE REP. Donald L. Totten, R-Hoffman Estates argued against the Democratic proposal, saying the election process should be brought closer to the people.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, also opposed the bill.

"All this is really doing is taking someone off the hook who goofed and that someone is the clerk of Cook County. If the law should be reformed, then let's study it," Schlickman said.

He objected to the fact that the preliminary vote on the absentee ballot bill came on the successful Democratic move to tack a 26-page amendment onto an obscure election code revision bill.

After the Democrats won approval for their amendment by a 90-76 margin, Republicans attempted to amend the same bill with their plan to allow township clerks to count the undeliverable ballots, but they were defeated 88 to 82.

The legislation still must have a final vote in the Illinois House and the Illinois Senate must concur with the amendment before the measure can be sent on to Gov. James R. Thompson.

Ex-VA chief guilty of misuse of funds

John S. Gleason Jr., 62, former head of the Veteran's Administration and former national commander of the American Legion, pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court Tuesday to charges he misapplied more than $500,000 in bank funds to his own use. Gleason, former chairman of the board of the Mercentile National Bank of Chicago, pleaded guilty before Judge Alfred Y. Kirkland on a three-count indictment returned June 14. Under a plea agreement, prosecutors will not make any sentencing recommendations in return for Gleason's cooperation with the U.S. attorney's office in other investigations. The agreement also provides that Gleason will not be prosecuted for any other alleged misconduct except if he perjures himself before a grand jury in other investigations.

Illinois briefs

Education increase blocked by House

The Illinois House Tuesday night blocked efforts to tack an extra $54 million onto the $1.3 billion state elementary and high school education budget. Chicago Democrats tried unsuccessfully to boost public education spending but a group of 16 suburban and Downstate Democrats blocked passage of the budget amendment. A portion of that group earlier had held together to stop passage of two other attempts to increase public school spending.

State Rep. Eugenia Chapman, D-Arlington Heights, who voted against the $54 million addition, but backed an equally unsuccessful, $25 million increase, said she had not been convinced the state could afford the higher increase. State Rep. Richard Mugalian, D-Palatine, opposed all three amendments. Last week Mugalian, chairman of the House Democratic study group, issued a critical memorandum stating Illinois comptroller Michael Bakalis, a fellow Democrat, had not provided sufficent evidence to justify any increase in spending over the governor's recommendations. The appropriation bill still must face a vote in the House and the Senate before going to Thompson's desk.

MEG funds OKd again

The state's seven controversial Metropolitan Enforcement Group units got a new lease on life Tuesday when the Illinois State gave final approval to legislation to fund the agencies for another year. The approval of two bills, including a $1.1 million appropriation also creates a showdown with Gov. James R. Thompson who is opposed to the continued operation of the MEG units. State Sen. John Graham, the senate sponsor of the bills predicted Thomspon may have a hard time vetoing the action because of the heavy support the legislation got in both chambers. "We will see what he does after he looks at the roll calls," Graham said.

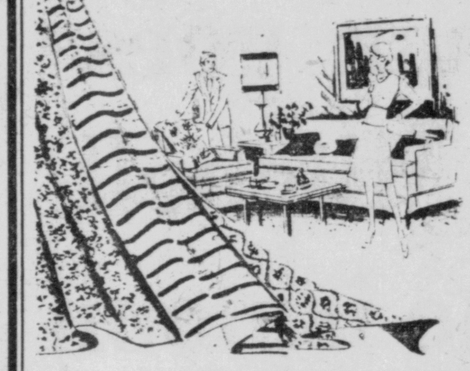

Local MEG officials had expressed fears that the future of the units were in doubt, because federal funding, which had amounted to 50 per cent of the operational costs, was being dropped. However under the new legislation, the state will pay for the bulk of the program, while local police departments will continue to provide the manpower.

ERA vote ot likely by June 30

The Equal Rights Amendment is not likely to be called for another vote before the legislature leaves town June 30, said one of the measure's chief sponsors Tuesday. Just moments after telling several hundred cheering pro-ERA demonstrators "there's lots of time this session" for ratification, Rep. Alan Greiman, D-Skokie, told reporters he "wouldn't impose that kind of burden" on fellow lawmakers by calling ERA again in the 10 days before adjournment. ERA failed by six votes on a June 2 test vote in the House. Greiman put off a final vote which could come anytime before the 30th General Assembly expires in January 1979.

STRIKERS PICKETING the Fidelitone, Inc., warehouse, Elk Grove Township, want a pay hike, better hospital benefits and more working hours. The strike is in its second week.

Fidelitone strike lasts, no business effect cited

Striking workers continued to picket the Fidelitone Inc., warehouse, 3001 Malmo Dr., Elk Grove Township, Tuesday, but management officials said the strike has had little effect on business. The walkout is in its second week.

The workers, members of the Independent Chicago Truck Drivers' Helpers and Warehouse Workers Union, are demanding pay increases, hospital insurance for dependents and longer working hours per week, said Thomas Yerman, a forklift operator.

Bob Nowak, chief negotiator for the union, would not reveal the salary being sought in the talks, saying the item is "negotiable."

The firm handles stereo and television parts for Sears, Roebuck and Co.

"Workers here are making an average of about $3.50 an hour now," Yerman said. "We are looking for a substantial increase."

YERMAN SAID THE union also is demanding that the company pay for "at least half" the $18 a month cost of hospital insurance for workers' dependents. Workers now pay the entire cost of the insurance.

The final issue is hours. Yerman said Fidelitone's last offer would guarantee only for 20 hours of work a week. He said the union is arguing for a guaranteed 37½ hour week.

Hiram A. Prince, Fidelitone vice president, said the company's last offer was for a 20 per cent pay increase — to $4.20 an hour — the first year of the proposed three-year contract with 7 per cent increases in each of the next two years.

Prince said the company also offered to pay 60 per cent of the dependents' hospital insurance costs.

HE SAID THE union demanded that an employe who reports for work on Monday be paid for a full week's labor even if he or she is sent home.

"We offered reporting pay," Prince said. "That means we will pay them for four hours work if they report in the morning and we have to send them home immediately."

"Generally speaking," Prince said, "things have been pretty quiet. They've stopped some shipments coming in and some going out, but we have ways of getting around them."

Explaining levitation gives teacher a lift

they are just a part. They are a part of TM's advance toward creating a society that is ideal. And that, Schulte says, is the ultimate goal.

But the conversation returns to levitation and invisibility. Schulte knew it was coming, he says, but he has never done it himself because he has not "been given the knowledge."

But it evolved, he says, two years ago in Europe, when Maharishi Mahesh Yogi closed the door to the Scientific Age and introduced the Age of Enlightenment.

"Our experience is so good that we should study now what is possible, Maharishi said," Schulte explains.

AND LAST YEAR, Schulte studied in Europe and learned about the "supernormal" abilities of man.

"After the courses, Maharishi said, 'Don't tell anybody because the world's not ready yet,' " he adds.

Now, however, the world is apparently "ready" and "this knowledge is being brought out."

But TM practitioners rarely offer demonstrations because "we're not going to get into a circus atmosphere," Schulte says. "It doesn't really matter if people believe us. It's happening."

AS EVIDENCE, he refers to an article published in an Iowa newspaper by a writer who witnessed one of the few levitation demonstrations.

But the article is not convincing. The writer describes the "levitation" as three persons sitting in the yoga position hopping up and down in the air.

But that can be explained, Schulte says.

For one thing, people go through three stages of levitation, he says. First, they just move up into the air and return to the ground. Second, they move up into the air and hover for awhile. And third, they move up into the air, hover and travel a few feet before coming back down.

In addition, Schulte says, the eyes sometimes refuse to accept what they see, and the writer of the article may have been afraid of th embarrassing reaction he'd receive if he actually wrote that people were levitating.

BUT THAT IS not the crushing argument. That comes with another exhibit.

SMOKE BILLOWS from Mount Elden, east of Flagstaff, as firefighters in Arizona and New Mexico battled to control forest fires that have burned thousands of acres of timber land. In New Mexico, crews dug firelines around an 11,000-acre blaze in the Jemez Mountains near the Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory. In Arizona, fire crews, facing unfavorable weather forecasts, fought to complete a line around a 9,000-acre blaze in the Coronado National Forest.

Loyal Amin troops on death rampage

Ugandan troops loyal to President Idi Amin have gone on a "rampage of killings" following an assassination attempt against Amin in which the mercurial dictator was wounded, the Kenya news agency said Tuesday. The agency said Amin was wounded during an ambush attack against his car last weekend and quoted sources close to Amin as saying he had been hospitalized in Uganda, thus explaining his mysterious disappearance.

It said hundreds of Ugandans were fleeing to Kenya to escape "certain death" at the hands of Amin's troops. In Luxembourg, British Foreign Secretary David Owen said Amin 'is alive and well" but would not elaborate or give the source of his information.

Wake Island Navy plane crashes

A Navy C130 plane carrying a crew of 16 crashed and burst into flames shortly after takeoff from Wake Island Tuesday. Two rescue planes were dispatched to look for survivors. Navy authorities said the plane belonged to Fleet Air Reconnaissance Squadron III based at Guam and was headed there when it crashed just after takeoff one mile offshore from the Wake Island air base at 9:30 p.m. Names of the crewmembers were withheld pending notification of next of kin.

China revamps million-man militia

China is revamping its multi-million member militia as part of a major defense buildup to guard against attack from the Soviet Union, Peking Radio said Tuesday. The radio broadcast, quoting a policy editorial from Liberation Army Daily, the Chinese armed forces newspaper, said the militia was being strengthened in conjunction with a modernization program for the regular armed forces. The radio quoted the editorial, which was published Sunday, as saying the buildup was necessary to guard against possible Soviet attack.

Brezhnev links Carter, cold war

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev Tuesday warned in Paris that President Carter's human rights advocacy could renew the cold war and said arms limitations talks with the United States were getting nowhere. Brezhnev made the statements in an unusually blunt 2½ hour meeting with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing at Rambouillet castle outside Paris in which the Soviet leader also accused France of trying to get back into NATO. Speaking of the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, Brezhnev was quoted as saying, "So far as concerns the recent talks with (Secretary of State Cyrus) Vance and subsequent diplomatic exchanges, it is not possible at this time to think that any progress has been achieved."

In the second of three meetings with Giscard, the Soviet president went on to denounce "certain Western policy moves which do not help detente and contradict the Helsinki agreement." Asked what Brezhnev meant, Soviet spokesman Leonid Zamiatin indicated that Brezhnev was referring to President Carter's criticism of alleged human rights violations in the Soviet Union.

Panel agrees to oil tax rebate

The House Ways and Means Committee agreed Tuesday to rebate President Carter's oil tax to the public for only one year, leaving open the possibility of spending the remaining three years' receipts on tax "reform." Under the committee's action, on a 19-17 vote, each adult taxpayer or recipient of Social Security and similar programs would receive $28 during 1978. Those qualifying as a "head of household" mainly divorced women with children — would get a double payment. This amount would be reflected in wage withholding rates rather than as a lump sum check, meaning taxpayers would barely notice the extra money although some $4.6 billion would be pumped into the economy.

The philosophy behind Carter's plan is to impose an excise tax on crude oil which would in effect raise its cost to the world oil price. Most of the income from this tax then would be returned to the public to help pay the extra fuel costs. The intent is to induce the public to spend less for energy.

AMA declares laetrile ineffective

Laetrile was declared an "ineffective medicine" for the treatment of cancer Tuesday by delegates to the American Medical Association's convention in San Francisco. Three resolutions dealing with the controversial drug were referred to the AMA's Board of Trustees for study before a final policy statement was given. The Rocky Mountain Conference delegation said that laetrile is a 'worthless" and "toxic" drug being exploited because of the restrictions on its use. The delegation recommended that "if laetrile is made available by legislative edict, it be as a substance rather than as a drug, and that the participation of a physician not be required."

Panel OKs U.S. funds for 'certain' abortions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Appropriations Committee voted Tuesday to allow use of federal funds for abortions where the life of the mother is in danger and in certain other cases.

Other instances where funds could be used would be:

• Where the mother has multiple sclerosis or renal disease "or other diseases which would seriously deform or debilitate the fetus."

• For the termination of ectopic pregnancy, an abnormality which is fatal to the mother.

• For victims of rape or incest.

In all other cases the government would be prohibited from using federal funds for performance of abortions.

By a vote of 16 to 8 the committee attached these provisions to a $60.7 billion appropriation bill for the departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare, which is expected to come up on the Senate floor later this week.

The House, in passing its version of the bill recently, included a flat ban on use of federal funds for abortions under any circumstances.

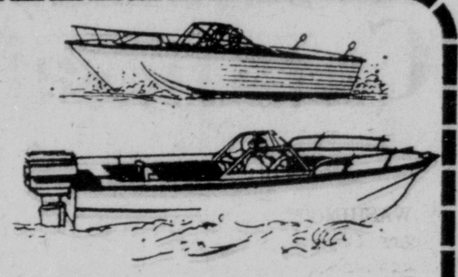

SEN. EDWARD BROOKE, R-Mass., said even the Senate committee provisions are too restrictive and that he will move on the Senate floor to take all limits off the use of funds for abortions.

On Monday Brooke persuaded the Senate panel simply to delete from the bill any reference to abortions. That vote was 11 to 10. But on Tuesday the committee reconsidered and voted 13 to 11 against Brooke.

The Senate panel's final version is somewhat more liberal in allowing abortion funds than present law technically on the books. That provision, approved by Congress in a compromise last year, bars use of the funds for abortions except where the life of the mother is in danger.

Its effect, however, has been stayed by a federal judge and the issue has been appealed to the Supreme Court, which ruled Monday states are not required to finance elective abortions.

Camp safety bills gathering dust

by LOUISE SWEENEY

WASHINGTON — For more than 10 years, Congress has treated summer-camp safety legislation like a Frisbee — tossing it back and forth between the House and Senate.

This year, Congress appears to be no closer to establishing federal standards for the 10,000 camps attended by 8 million children.

The Children and Youth Camp Safety Act now waits in the Senate, and a parallel bill in the House, but there appears to be little likelihood that such legislation will be passed this summer. The legislation would set up an advisory board at the Dept. of Health, Education, and Welfare to recommend standards for youth camps.

FORTY-FIVE STATES now have no standards for camp personnel, 17 no rules for program safety; 24 no rules for medical treatment and services regulations; 35 no day-camp regulations; and 45 have no rules governing out-of-camp trips. Furthermore, 45 states do not require a driver's license for employes, 53 per cent don't require flotation devices in boats, and 57 per cent have inadequate, or nonexistent fire-fighting equipment.

Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., author of the Children and Youth Camp Safety Act, estimates that 100 deaths and more than a quarter of a million serious injuries occur each summer at camp.

A spokesman for Ribicoff, who has championed similar legislation for the last 10 years, notes that the bill now is before the child and human development subcommittee, but hearings have not been scheduled. The subcommittee's new chairman is Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., who has not supported such bills in the past because, a spokesman says, "he felt there wasn't a demonstrated need for federal intervention in this area."

The spokesman says Cranston plans no hearings on the bill at this time, but will give it higher priority if the House acts on a parallel bill sponsored by Rep. Joseph M. Gaydos, D-Penn. "We're not locked in on the position of not supporting it," says the Cranston spokemman.

THE GAYDOS BILL, passed by the House Compensation, Health, and Safety Committee, now is before the Rules Committee. All sides agree that, given these circumstances, there is no way legislation can be passed in time to affect this summer's campers.

A spokesman for the American Camping Association (ACA), the trade association of camp owners, says his group supports the bill. He suggests that federal regulations are necessary because the states haven't done the job.

Alan J. Stolz, national legislation chairman of the ACA, says that about half, or 45 to 46 per cent, of the camps in the U.S. can't meet ACA accepted minimal safety requirements. And he adds that in the last 90 days six states have voted against legislation for camp standards.

If the federal legislation is passed, HEW will develop standards in cooperation with an advisory council on children and youth camp safety. Financial incentives of up to 80 per cent in federal matching funds will be provided to states that choose to accept the federal standards, enforce their own regulations that must be at least as tough as the federal ones, or allow HEW authority to enforce federal standards.

In introducing the bill earlier this year, Ribicoff noted, "It is a sad commentary that we enact legislation to protect plants, sea life, wild horses, and burros, and other animals, yet we fail to provide meaningful safeguards for the millions of boys and girls — our children and grandchildren — who attend summer camps."

Chilean plane hijacker arrested by authorities

MENDOZA, Argentina (UPI) — A disgruntled Chilean govenment employe hijacked a 727 airliner to Argentina Tuesday but the pilot talked him into surrendering before he could carry out a threat to blow up the plane and the 78 persons aboard with dynamite.

The surrender was announced in Santiago by an airline spokesman moments after the 71 passengers and seven crewmembers were seen descending from the heavily guarded plane, which landed near an Argntina air base and was surrounded immediately by Argentine police and troops in jeeps and armed with machine guns.

Earlier reports had said there were two or three Chilean hijackers armed with dynamite and that they were threatening to blow up the plane unless they were supplied a transcontinental Boeing 707 jet to fly them to asylum in Algeria. Bystanders were kept more than 500 yards away because of the threat.

AN AIRLINE spokesman identified the lone hijacker as Carlos Tamayo, an employe of the Chilean Public Works Ministry. He said Tamayo apparently acted alone.

Pilot Diogenes Arredondo talked Tamayo into surrendering, and Tamayo was immediately arrested by Argentine authorities.

In Mendoza, airport sources said Tamayo, whom they described as "mentally deranged," agreed to surrender after authorities offered him a one way airline ticket to Algiers via Rome.

The plane, the first seized in Chile since a military junta overthrew Marxist President Salvator Allende in 1973, was seized on a domestic flight from Antofagasta in northern Chile to the capital of Santiago. It was flown to Mendoza just across the Argentine border, where it landed about 1 p.m.

The airport drama lasted more than four hours.

Water Closet Rating

by Ed Landwehr

Now comes a new TV rating system. City water pumping stations have a pressure instrument that gauges water use. A sudden mass public usage of the water system will drop pressure considerably. One city recorded a sudden 26-pound pressure reduction during a commercial of a popular television program. They figured that 20,000 people flushed at the same time.

I suppose they have statistical charts denoting the size of the audience to the water pressure drop at any given time. It's probably just as good a rating system as any.

We have a rating system on our TV services at Landwehr's TV & Appliances, too. If a customer chews us out, we know we'd better do something fast. And when you phone 255-0700, no matter where we're sitting, we'll get going fast.

Our floor display of nationally-advertised TVs and stereos is open for your visit. Drop in at 1000 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights and feel free to browse.

Four and five year old children at the Academy learn to read, write, add, subtract, and spell. This is why Academy children always do well in other grades. They have received the best learning foundation. And they have fun learning! The Academy makes it interesting.

The half-day, 8:30 a.m. to 12 noon four and five year old program, costs less than nursery school. $450 is the complete charge and that's for five days a week, September to June.

Students in the 1st-12th grades test one to two years above the national averages. Special help is given to new students and slower students. No wonder the Academy has been featured in the Wall St. Journal, Chicago Tribune, Newsweek and on two T.V. networks.

Children attending the Academy go to many different churches, but all go to the same school where they are receiving an educational program of Christian principles and scholastic excellence.

Residents need check of cracks

Some residents of Mount Prospect have cracks in their houses, and they deserve something better than a run-around about who is responsible.

The residents live near the site of one of the deep tunnel shafts being built by the Metropolitan Sanitary District as part of a flood control project connected with the sewage treatment plant being built in Des Plaines.

In order to build the deep tunnels, one of which has a shaft at William Street and Berkshire Lane in Mount Prospect, the construction company has to blast through rock.

And that blasting, several homeowners in the area have complained, caused cracks, both in windows and in their brick houses.

It is impossible for a non-engineer to determine whether the homeowners are correct. But one thing is clear: they deserve an impartial investigation of their complaint since the insurance company for the contractor doing the blasting denies liability.

The Illinois Department of Insurance has the authority to make the insurance company pay the homeowners claims if they find that it is liable. However, after the residents complained to the state department, they were simply told the department could not fix liability. They say state officials never listened to their side of the story.

Bert Meidler, of 717 S. William St., one of the most outspoken of the homeowners involved, has said he will not accept the fact that nothing can be done. He and two neighbors plan to continue to complain. They say other residents have complaints of similar damage but don't want to fight about it.

Meidler and his neighbors may be wrong about what caused their damage, but since the blasting was right across the street from their homes, they may also be right.

It is clearly time for their complaints to be fully investigated. If the contractor and the state insurance department can't do that, perhaps the MSD board should.

When the MSD announced its plans to build a sewage treatment plant in Des Plaines despite community objections agency officials promised to be good neighbors.

Now's their chance.

Heroism in line of duty

Hundreds of Northwest suburban families learn first-hand each year the value of the paramedic programs operated by Northwest suburban fire departments.

Last month, during a training session at Great Lakes Naval Base, it was the paramedic's turn to appreciate each other.

Two Arlington Heights paramedic rookies and a Palatine recruit are credited with saving the lives of three fellow recruits who were overcome by smoke during a May 27 training exercise.

Terry Valentino and John Fisher, the two Arlington Heights paramedics, were honored for their "bravery and resourcefulness" by the Arlington Heights Village Board. Also deserving honors is Palatine recruit Dean Stecher, who joined the two Arlington Heights paramedics in applying the techniques they had been learning to a real situation.

The incident Valentino, Fisher and Stecher were involved in points out to any who need reminding the hazards of the firefighter's job. While tragedies are fortunately uncommon, firefighters live always on the brink of catastrophe when they respond to calls.

The three heroes in this incident are quick to give credit to their fellow trainees, rather than hog the glory. As John Fisher said, "We just did what we were trained to do. If it had been the other way around the guys we saved would have done the same for us."

We're certain that's true. And that is something all Northwest suburbanites can be thankful for. Paramedics — and all firefighters — are quick to serve in an emergency.

That so? I've been thinking a lot about you too!

Comment on Dist. 25 debate

The closing of a school is a traumatic event — regardless of the neighborhood or community in which it is located. It is a painful experience for those who are losing their school. Arlington Heights Dist. 25 has already closed two schools — Wilson and North. Both schools were old and approaching or beyond the 40 year optimum use limit. The Booz, Allen and Hamilton study had suggested their closings as a result of its findings. The actions of the board seemed logical and responsible.

Now the board is planning to close another school. They say it will either be Miner or Thomas. The two schools which are being considered are both relatively new — Thomas was built in 1964 and Miner in 1957. Both buildings are in good condition with many years of use ahead of them. Both buildings are in central locations, thus enabling them to draw from a greater number of feeder schools. The closing of one of these two schools will be much harder for residents to accept.

At the board of education meeting on June 2, concerned citizens asked some questions of the Board:

1. In light of the recommendations of the Booz, Allen, and Hamilton report, none of which include the closing of Miner Junior High School, why is the board of education considering such a course of action? What facts does the board have to justify this?

2. Is the board making this decision based on what is best for the quality of education in all of Dist. 25, or is it basing its decision upon the fact that an outside party has been found to lease the school?

3. What are the board's plans for South Junior High which is already 52 years old, costly to operate, can only decline physically in future years, and was recommended in the Booz, Allen, and Hamilton report as one of the schools that could be closed?

4. Could a citizen's advisory committee be formed to find satisfactory uses for the vacated building which would be compatible with and acceptable to the surrounding neighborhood?

5. The Booz, Allen, and Hamilton report recommended that a master plan be adopted by the board. Does such a master plan exist, and if so how do the current proposals fit into it?

The citizens have asked some thoughtful and logical questions of the board. As yet they have received no answers. I am hoping that at the next board of education meeting on June 23, they will receive some thoughtful and logical answers to their questions so that whichever school is ultimately closed, it will be with as little pain as possible for whichever neighborhood is involved.

'Heal the factions on Dist. 59 board'

Yes, I am a defeated candidate for election to the Board of Education of Elk Grove Twp. District 59. Reference to that loss has been made by The Herald on almost every instant in which I have been quoted. Additionally those quotes have been generally out of context and misleading.

I have taken an active interest in what is going on in Dist. 59. My motivation is not to continue the fight. The elected members have a single "mandate" from the people. That mandate is to provide our children with a good education, an education that prepares them to grow and succeed in a complicated world. When that duty is being abused and the associated authority is misdirected, somebody must speak out. That is what I am trying to do. Any statement I make or action I take, in my opinion, reflects the attitude of many other parents. The difference between me and my "supporters" is that I am at the meetings and I have no hesitation about speaking out.

Dist. 59 does not have a board of seven members. We have two polarized groups, one with four votes and the other with three votes. It would do the community well if a formula can be found to eliminate the animosities between the factions and result in a coehisive board with only one objective — to meet the needs of the children.

'League interests beyond township'

The Palatine League of Women Voters would like to thank The Herald for its interest in the organization as reflected in the recent June 9 article. However, the manner in which the article addressed the League's stand against the continued expansion of township government may have misled readers. Furthermore, the article gave the implication that the League has indulged in partisan politics, a position that the League has strived to avoid in the past and will continue to do in the future. Perhaps the most unfortunate aspect of the article was the impression that township is our only concern and program item. Moreover, the Palatine League's position on township government has nothing to do with either the township officials currently in office or party philosophies those people might expound.

Non-partisan policy is fundamental to the objectives of the League of Women Voters at all organizational levels. Although the League does not support any political party or candidates, it does encourage both members and non-members — all citizens of the community — to participate as individuals in the political process. Of course, this means that individual members can and should support either the political party or candidates of their choice as well as actively pursue local, state and national issues.

In addition to the position on township, the League has positions on many national, state and local items, including environmental quality, and in particular, water conservation, the local elementary school district, child welfare and juvenile justice, merit selection of judges and consolidation of elections. Our Observer Corps monitors public meetings and are frequently the only citizens attending many of the local meetings. Our Voter Service sponsors Candidates' Nights and Informational Meetings to provide citizens with non-partisan information prior to elections and/or referendums. As a part of all on going program the League provides literature about various aspects of government, all of it available to the public.

Paramedics win commendations

On Friday, May 20, my small grandson and I were at the hardware store at Schaumburg and Roselle roads when a customer had a heart attack in his car. The store owner called the paramedics and within moments they were at the scene, pulling the man from his car and expeditiously began life saving attempts to revive him. But in peaceful sleep death had won out this time.

He wore a wedding band, thus I knew he must be a husband, father and grandfather.

As my four year old and I left to return home, he asked, Gramma will he go and live with God? Matt, I replied, he already has.

To the young paramedics, we are proud to have you as part of our community. Bless you.

Mrs. R. M. Wilson
Schaumburg

ON APRIL 26, while I was a guest in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Max Moeller in Arlington Heights, I became very short of breath. The Emergency Medical Service Unit (EMS) of the Arlington Heights Fire Department was called and it arrived within a few minutes. The well-trained members of the unit (Paramedics) gave me oxygen with a face mask and intravenous medication. There was continuous radio communication between the paramedics at my bedside and the emergency room physician at Northwest Community Hopital and when my condition was considered to be sufficiently improved, I was taken to the emergency room of the hospital where the paramedics' tentative diagnosis of acute congestive heart failure was confirmed.

It is my belief that the paramedics kept me alive until I was admitted to the hospital and I feel deeply indebted and very grateful to them. There was no charge for the paramedic service or the ambulance because Arlington Heights treats its visitors the same as it does its own people. This fact was also much appreciated.

I live in a city of 55,000 inhabitants but we do not have an EMS unit. Copies of this letter will be sent to each member of our City Council.

EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS, be they nursery school, elementary, junior high, senior high, college or university, have always been assets to the people of our country. We seem to thrive on education of all kinds. Hence, the success of vocational schools, Montessori, special education facilities, early learning centers, schools for the blind and handicapped, medical schools, agricultural institutes, etc. Why then, the hesitancy to welcome Roosevelt University with anything but open arms?

For many of us, it would mean an opportunity to continue our own education. For others, it would mean a chance to send children to a university which we could not otherwise afford. For others, it would mean the chance at a job.

Many of us moved to the suburbs because of the schools. I think we have here the opportunity to add an excellent university to complement the outstanding facilities (Dist. 25, Dist. 214 and Harper College) already available to us.

The start of school is forever

Primary school education is close to becoming catastrophic. The school boards do not know. The teachers do not care. The parents, in many instances, are ignorant. The child often graduates with a third grade competence in reading and mathematics.

A school principal told 200 students that they could not be graduated unless they displayed a little competence in reading and mathematics. He was willing to settle for fifth-year work.

It is easy, I know, for the writer to sit in lofty judgment. Don't bug me with those letters because I've been writing about this every other year for 20 years.

SOME TEACHERS are dedicated. So are some parents. Some students are so well-motivated that they seldom fall lower than an A-minus. These are the exceptions, in recent years. A boy genius graduated from City College in New York at the age of 15. He was summa cum laude.

So what? He flunked in bowling. And there lies part of our problem. What has bowling or tossing Frisbees or girls' wrestling teams got to do with education?

Education is the carpentry of the mind. It is an edifice of information and logic. An educator once said, "Raising a child is very much like building a skyscraper. If the first few stories are slightly out of line, no one will notice. But when the building is 18 or 20 stories high, everyone will see that it tilts."

When our elementary schools fail the student, the child is not ready for high school. Often, the child fails the teacher. The parents betray both. In millions of homes, the voice of education is, "Do your homework!"

THAT ISN'T enough. The order sounds like a command. No one enjoys obeying a command. The youngster learns from unsympathetic parents that school is hateful. He despises schoolwork and books. At the end of each year, his teacher promotes him out of her way.

The system is cockeyed. A long time ago I listened to a Jesuit teacher explain that education is 70 per cent discipline, 30 per cent information. I became so angry that my fingers beat a tattoo on his chest.

Perhaps 30 per cent discipline, 70 per cent information. I recognize the importance of discipline. I tossed easers at teachers and I dropped burned-out bulbs from the roof of the school.

Fortunately, I paid. The ruler was applied to the palm of the hand, unless I flinched. If I did, it was applied to the back on the hand, on edge.

THERE IS no shortcut to understanding simple mathematics and reading. It is chronically painful. The first must be remembered, as in 7 times 9; the second moves from "Run Dick run, see Dick run" all the way to fine books which create visions and dreams.

Possibly one-third or more of college students are wasting their time. They have no goals and little aptitude. Those should be out working. But no student is so rich that he can afford to skip the first eight grades of schooling.

It is difficult to encourage a taste for mathematics unless the boy or girl feels a kinship for numbers. But it must be taught, at least to the stage of simple algebra.

Reading is another matter. Kelly and I made omnivorous readers of three out of four girls — the fourth devours love stories. We did it by discussing plots of books at dinner. We spoke slightly above their level of understanding, and left them dangling with half a story.

IF THEY were interested, we said, read the whole book. We started all of them with Nancy Drew and Louisa May Alcott and allowed each to find her own level of understanding.

They were not allowed to look at television without giving equal time to reading books of their choice. For a time, I didn't care if they read trash, so long as they had their little noses in books.

An adult today stands little chance in life unless he understands mathematics and reading. We are crippling millions of little ones today because we are too busy to care.

Perhaps I shouldn't speak so loudly. Our third and fourth daughters are practically out of the school system. Both are studying for their master's degrees.

These day I do not become irritated when they do not read. What bugs me now is when they try to explain life to me . . .

Parochiaid bills no longer bring battles on floor

Steve Brown

From our Springfield bureau

Eugene Schlickman

If the proponents of giving state aid to private education needed a theme song this year, they might consider something like "What a Difference a Decade Makes."

It has been nearly that long since the big push started nationwide for "parochiaid". Then debate stormed around the halls of government. Today bills float through the Illinois General Assembly with hardly more than a bat of the eye.

The keepers of legend in this capital city remember the days of fiery, emotional debate raging long into the night.

Now the objections to giving books, supplies, transportation and even tuition grants to children attending private or parochial schools are little more than perfunctory.

LAWMAKERS, LIKE State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, remember the more tempestuous times. Schlickman headed the initial effort in the state for aid to nonpublic schools.

Not surprisingly, he sees changes on the other side of the argument as a cause for the disappearance of the emotion-charged debate.

The public and their lawmakers are disenchanted with the public schools, Schlickman says.

The argument for aid to private schools he advances becomes more convincing to those who vote to pour millions of dollars in schools and then learn that their children cannot read.

This disillusionment might be the best argument for increased support for private schools, but there are other possible causes.

The most logical reason for legislative support for parochiaid lies in the boisterous nature of many of the state's teachers.

UNIONIZED AND mobilized, the teachers swept into town right after the Illinois House put more than 60 per cent of its members in favor of the $1,000 per student flat grant program to non public schools.

The correlation might be strained, but militant teachers have caused no end of irritation for some legislators who do not want to give them the collective bargaining-right-to-strike legislation they want.

If anything grabs the attention of the public and their reactionary representatives more than their kids being unable to read, write and count without taking off their shoes or recharging the batteries in the digital calculator, it is their kids' teachers marching the picket line.

The legislature is feeling the heat from back home and is almost falling over itself to try something else on education.

The enthusiasm for parochiaid does not seem to be dimmed by the fact that the programs approved could cost the financially strapped state nearly $30 million, according to the Illinois Office of Education or that the number of students in private schools has fallen nearly 30 per cent in the last 15 years.

While the current legislative product might not produce much more than the basis for new lawsuits on parochiaid, the people's elected representatives are dropping resistance to giving tax dollars to non public institutions.

Lack of unions make states in South attractive to firms

CLEVELAND — Nearly one third of all announced foreign investments in manufacturing in the United States are made in the southeast. Why? Mostly because unions are feeble and wage rates comparatively low.

"Foreigners are terrified about being unionized," says Robert Will, an economic geographer at the Austin Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, who has helped a score of European companies to find sites in the United States. He thinks they are unnecessarily paranoid, and tells them so.

American industrialists agree. They reckon foreign companies sometimes overlook high distribution costs when they are beguiled into investing in the South by cheap land deals, effusive politicians and their own fears about the militancy of American unions.

LEFT IN THE dust are the heavily unionized states of Mideast region, which takes in such industrial heavyweights as New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, and of the great lakes, Illinois, Michigan and Ohio among them.

For most of this century they have clawed in a lion's share of foreign investment, yet between 1968 and 1975 the Mideast share dropped to 17.7 per cent and that of the Great Lakes to 13.6 per cent.

Canadian companies setting up plants just across the border to serve both their own and the American market help to stop this from shrinking further. Take New York. Its commerce department estimates that $20 million of the $29 million invested by foreigners in the state last year came from Canadian compaines.

American industrialists agree that textile, apparel and shoe investments in Dixie make sense. The region's low wage costs, plus those import quotas camouflaged as "orderly marketing agreements," give these labor-intensive industries a chance to compete against Far East and Mediterranean rivals. Energy investments in the South are also rated sound since Texas, Louisiana and Alabama are the hub of the American fuel and petrochemical industries.

NOT SO, THOUGH, for such things as tires. Michelin of France is described as eccentric, and worse, for swerving far away from its competitors, clustered around Akron, Ohio, and its customers, the car compaines headquartered in Detroit, in setting up its United States factories in South Carolina, a state where only 8 per cent of the nonagricultural workers are union members.

True, this has permitted Michelin to escape the clutches of the United Rubber Workers union and to pay its workers lower wages than those paid by Goodyear, Firestone, B.F. Goodrich, Uniroyal and the rest, but it may be only a temporary reprieve.

Chances are the union will eventually catch up with Michelin, especially if the textile union's drive in the Carolinas is a successful wedge.

Still, for the time being at least, southern states are going great guns in battling for foreign investors, and quote incessantly from a "business climate" study prepared by Fantus Co., the industrial consultancy division of Dun and Bradstreet, the credit rating agency.

When it decided the balminess, or otherwise, of the business climate in the 48 mainland states, this study took account of such corporate meteorological factors as taxes, labor laws, unemployment costs, welfare costs and state indebtedness.

THE STATES THAT came out best were, in order, Texas, Alabama, Virginia, South Dakota, South Carolina, North Carolina, Florida and Arkansas. All, not coincidentally, are among the minority of states that have enacted so called "right-to-work" laws that make the job of a union organizer very hard.

At the other extreme, New York was rated the least attractive state for business followed by California, Massachusetts, Michigan and Delaware (in that order).

The most skilled angler for foreign investment has been South Carolina. Around 70 companies — Hoechst of Germany, Sandoz of Switzerland, Michelin of France and ICI of Britain among them — have been landed by a blend of southern charm and northern hucksterism.

THE NORTHERN STATES are catching on. Jealous rivals (Ohio among them) complain governor Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania offered to do everything but turn the state assembly into a car showroom when he put together a $71 million deal to persuade Volkswagen to hop its Rabbits off an assembly line in New Stanton, 38 miles from downtown Pittsburgh.

The unions, though, could do more than any northern state governor to level the odds in this battle between the states if they ever win their perennial campaign to persuade the Congress to repeal section 14 (b) of the Taft-Hartley act, which permits states to pass right-to-work laws. Thomas (Tip) O'Neill, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, agrees the unions are right, but does not plan just now to do anything to help them: "It's an old rule of politics that you should not field the team unless you can win."

ONE OF THE few times the lights have been used at Arlington Park since their installation in May 1969 was Sept. 10, 1971 during a motorcycle race. The Herald has learned that Arlington Park officials Thursday will ask the Illinois Racing Board to allow night harness racing at the track from Oct. 1 to Dec. 22.

Arlington Park to seek night racing

Arlington Park was equipped for night racing in May 1969, when lights were installed with the permission of the racing board.

But horses ran at night only 10 days, from Aug. 28 through Sept. 8, 1969.

THE ONLY OTHER night events at Arlington Park have been the Yamaha Motorcycle Gold Cup race on Sept. 10, 1971, and the one week Future of America Fair from Aug. 24 through Sept. 3, 1973.

In October 1969, Arlington Heights annexed the track to the village. Among the terms of the five-year annexation agreement was the stipulation that the village would not object to night racing if it was sought by the track.

In April 1970, track officials announced they would not ask for night racing dates and have not done so until now.

Night racing at Arlington Park could bring at least 10,000 bettors to the track each day, and Arlington Heights Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson said the 71 additional racing days could mean $100,000 more for the village from parking and sales tax revenues.

THE FIRE THAT destroyed Washington Park ended an experimental winter racing season that some industry officials said was disappointing.

As few as 2,100 bettors were in attendance on several occasions and the average daily handle was $520,000 — about half that of other harness tracks.

During its daytime season last year, Arlington Park averaged a daily attendance of 14,691 and a daily handle of $1.6 million.

Residents who live near the track and were invited to tonight's meeting at Arlington Park said they were promised by Tom Rivera, public relations officer for the track, that they would be notified before any changes in the racing season were made.

Joan Hammerstone, president of the Westgate Homeowners Assn., said, "Logically speaking, we assume racing dates are going to be what the meeting is about. In the past, Mr. Rivera has assured us that when a question like this comes up we would be contacted."

Tom Gillis, president of the Ridge Park Homeowners Assn., said, "Mr. Rivera said it's too complicated to lay out on the phone, which means they have something up their sleeve. We want to see the facts but I think my association would be against an extended season and night racing."

Night racing not big to residents

near the race track who were contacted by The Herald said they do not object to night racing.

"We need the taxes," said Gladys Rose, 749 S. Warren Ave., Palatine. "The lights help the area and make it safer at night."

LISE BOLLE, 657 S. Warren Ave., Palatine, a resident of the Rose Park area north of the track, said she does not object to night racing.

"We don't really hear it here and the racing doesn't bother us," she said. "It's not a real problem."

But a neighbor living a block away, in Palatine, Marie Hanlon, said she thinks residents should "fight it as long as we can."

"We have enough problems with traffic now," she said. "We need some peace and quiet. I've been living here 20 years and I'm against it."

"You'd get more people for night racing than you do during the day," said Fran Guziel, 647 N. Wilke Rd., Arlington Heights. "I think they already make enough money so why do they need it? I don't like the idea of using the lights."

Mrs. Guziel called her feelings for the race track "a paradox."

"I love the horses, but the track draws the seediest people," she said.

Epilepsy: the hush-hush disability

GETTING THEIR HEADS together, Jim Davies, service agent for the Epilepsy Foundation of America, and Roselyn Newman of Des Plaines, seek ways to overcome prejudice against epileptics and to establish self-help groups so that those with the disorder may help one another.

Misunderstanding of disorder exists

by ELEANOR RIVES

(First of two parts)

A famous symphony conducter has it.

The creator of a popular comic strip has it.

Movie actor John Considine, hockey player Gary Howett and golf pro Roger Maltbe all have it, as did Julius Caesar, Alexander the Great, Napoleon, Lord Byron, Handel and Dostoevski.

Today, according to the Epilepsy Foundation of America (EFA), more than 4 million Americans have epilepsy. That's one of every 50 persons. In the Chicagoland area alone, there are 140,000 epileptics, more than all those with cancer, muscular dystrophy, multiple sclerosis, cerebral palsy and tuberculosis combined.

BUT NOBODY TALKS about it. Those who do not have it feel uncomfortable or embarrassed when they come across someone who has. When they hear the word "epilepsy," they visualize someone squirming on the ground, twitching and jerking convulsively. Yet seizures of any type are completely controlled by anti-convulsant medication in about 50 per cent of all epileptics, and partially controlled in another 30 per cent.

Those who have epilepsy do not talk about it because they are afraid of the stigma attached to the disease. They are afraid of being humiliated, or rejected, of being shunned by their friends, of losing their job if their secret becomes known. As high as 25 per cent of employable epileptics are without jobs. Of those employed, three-fourths are working in jobs beneath their capabilities.

JOHN RAMAKER, EFA'S executive director, asserts that it is time to bring epilepsy out of the closet, to discuss it openly, intelligently and sympathetically, to replace ignorance and fear with understanding.

First of all, what is it?

EFA defines epilepsy as a disorder of the central nervous system marked by sudden and periodic lapses of consciousness (seizures) and an abnormal release of electrical energy within the brain.

One might describe it as a "short circuit" of the brain's electrical impulses, a type of "lightning storm" in the brain. This interferes with the brain's normal work and it loses partial or complete control over muscles, consciousness, the senses or even thoughts.

WHAT IS it not?

Epilepsy is not a form of mental illness, nor does it cause retardation or insanity. Intelligence in epileptics varies just as it does in non-epileptics. There is no connection between psychotic behavior and epilepsy, although the distorted views of society and the unfair treatment of epileptics can lead to psychological problems.

Epilepsy is not contagious.

It is not considered hereditary, although, as is the case with cancer, one may inherit the tendency to develop it. In most cases, epilepsy does not prevent a person from leading a normal, active and full life.

Epilepsy, then, is not the devastating disability people formerly thought it was.

Epileptic convulsions (seizures) can be classified broadly into three types:

- Grand mal — characterized by violent shaking of the whole body and temporary loss of consciousness. This type usually lasts from one to five minutes.
- Petit mal — characterized by staring into space or rapid blinking, losing consciousness for a number of seconds. This type is most often associated with children.
- Psychomotor, or temporal lobe — confusion, dizziness, purposeless movements such as lip smacking, repeated hand gestures or aimless walking, lasting from a few minutes to several hours.

"The majority of people who have had grand mal seizures over a period of time have some warning," explained Jim Davies, service agent and counselor for the EFA and himself an epileptic.

HE WAS REFERRING to what is called the "aura" — unusual colors, smells or sounds, numbness or tingling or some other signal of the onset of a seizure. The aura warns the epileptic to lie down to prevent a fall and possible injury. "In most cases, it is not even necessary for anyone else to be there," he said.

In grand mal seizure, the patient clamps his jaws shut, but that doesn't mean you have to put something in his mouth, according to Jim, "at any rate, never anything harder than a tie or folded handkerchief between his side teeth. And never try to grab his tongue," he added. "That old idea that an epileptic might swallow his tongue is misinformation. My tongue is attached the same as yours."

AN EPILEPTIC NURSE, quoted in an EFA brochure, suggested that the less done for a person in convulsion, the better off he is likely to be. She cited times when pencils were shoved through the roof of her mouth, pills poked down her throat, and water poured over and in to her until she nearly choked. The danger of dying was not in the seizure — it was in the good intentions of the people wanting to help!

These good intentions might better be channeled into helping the person to the ground, preventing his falling, clearing the area around him so he does not injure himself, turning him on his side so the saliva can run out of his mouth, remaining calm while the seizure runs its course. Unless the seizure lasts longer than 10 minutes or is followed by another one, it is usually unnecessary to call a doctor.

"As the person comes out of the seizure, too much panic and excitement could trigger a second one," said Davies.

How can you tell when a seizure is truly over? "Ask a thought-process question," suggested Davies, "like his address or phone number. Don't ask, 'Are you all right: His 'yeah' might not mean a thing."

LATEST RESEARCH indicates that in the majority of cases epilepsy is symptomatic. It is caused by something else, perhaps an injury, a blow on the head, a high fever, a disease such as measles or encephalitis. Seizures in babies are sometimes linked to a difficult birth or the improper use of forceps.

Jim Davies developed epilepsy after a skull injury in Vietnam when he was 22. After a long period of frustration, self-pity, and withdrawal from society, he pulled himself from the pit of deep depression and began to do something positive about his condition.

Now 30, recently married to a young woman whose epilepsy also can be traced to a head injury, his grand mal seizures are almost completely controlled by anti-convulsant medication. He is able to work, to drive, to counsel other epileptics.

Who better can help than someone who's been there?

Parents don't own kids

by JEANNE LESEM

"Parents don't own the children they bring into the world."

No, that's not a teen-ager speaking.

She is Shirley Gould, mother of two grown children and a psychotherapist dedicated to bridging the gap between generations.

"I tell parents what they must do so parents and children can maintain friendship," she says.

Mrs. Gould is in private practice in the Chicago area. She specializes in family counseling.

"Most parents really believe they can direct and control what their kids do and think and feel," she said in an interview. "They feel it is their duty."

It not only is not their duty, she said, it is something they shouldn't even attempt.

WHEN A GENERATION gap develops, Mrs. Gould says parents should be responsible for bridging it. They must realize, she said, that children are separate individuals, and that teen-agers must begin to learn to leave their parents, to become mature human beings.

It is not important, she said, for parents to remember what it was like to be a teen-ager themselves.

"It is much more relevant to think how it is to be a teen today." Her first recommendation: "Stop, look and listen."

In rearing her own son and daughter, Mrs. Gould said she had to cope with many of the problems she now advises other parents about. She has written a book on the subject for parents and children — but mostly for parents: "Teenagers, The Continuing Challenge" (Hawthorn $6.95).

The pursuit of success, the pressure to achieve it, affects personalities, no matter how bright, she said.

"The real bright kid feels he or she must get all A's or 'I'm no good.' "

At the other extreme is the teen-ager who is not particularly intellectual, who can become completely bewildered in this atmosphere, she said.

She thinks school is not always the solution, although in the United States we expect children to remain in school into their middle years.

SOME YOUNGSTERS might be happier and more productive if they were allowed to get jobs, she said.

Mrs. Gould sees families as partnerships in which each member participates to his or her own ability.

"The 4-year-old can set the table.

"The teen-ager can certainly do the laundry for the family.

"There are dozens of tasks necessary to on-going family life."

The time to introduce such tasks is when children are young, she said, but "even if they aren't started at four, it is possible to change."

Mrs. Gould also urges parents to remember that "nobody can be a perfect family, nobody can have a conflict-free relationship, nobody can work things out so everybody's dreams are fulfilled.

"A CHILD WHO is serviced all his life by his parents, his grandparents, maybe by servants, cannot cope on his own."

She also said parents who play "policeman," demanding that thier children "do this, do that, make the bed, take out the garbage, feed the dog," are asking for trouble.

In some households, most of the children will obey these directives, she said, but generally at least one doesn't.

New legislation makes it tougher to 'live together'

Julie Martoccio

Women and children first

Dear Ms. Martoccio,

With so many couples going in for living together arrangements, is there any chance that common law marriages will be made legal in states where they presently are not?—L.S.

Dear L.S.

Anything is possible, but I wouldn't bank on it if I were you. Anyone interested in developing a marriage from a living together arrangement had better talk over the possibility before it starts.

There are indications, however, that laws are getting tougher in situations where extra responsibilities might become a burden on the state, i.e. taxpayers. In an effort to curb and decrease the number of children becoming wards of the state, some new legislation has been introduced that has caught the public by surprise. (It is important to note the changes because often they become "leaders" for other states to follow.)

FOR INSTANCE, the Arkansas state legislature has come up with a unique plan whose purpose is to discourage living together. A new proposed law, if passed, would have the couple pay $1,500 for a "privilege tax." In addition, a formal procedure is required. Couples applying for this license would have to appear before a judge, pay the fee and then register with the county sheriff.

What if the living-together couple balks at the plan? They can be arrested and fined $2,000.

"Get tough" in the criminal area of the law had the state of Arizona legislature passing one that doesn't seem to have a precedent and which is arousing some differences of opinions between those who favor rehabilitation and those who advocate punishment. The law makes members of the Arizona State Board of Pardons and Paroles liable to a suit for releasing prisoners who then commit a violent crime.

THE RULING RELATED to a suit brought three years ago by parents of a boy who was slain by a parolee. On the same occasion, the latter had killed another person and wounded a third in a Tucson tavern. Six months previous, the slayer had been paroled from the Arizona State Prison. He had been serving an 8-10 year consecutive sentence for attempted murder and robbery. (He had beaten and left his brother-in-law in the desert believing him to be dead.)

The parents of the slain boy appealed a lower court decision and the Supreme Court of Arizona ruled that the board "had only a qualified immunity and may be held liable for personal injury and death proximately caused by grossly negligent or reckless release."

The Illinois legislature has some "get tough" legislation fights on its hands. It will be interesting to see how far it will go in comparison to Arkansas and some of the other states who are trying to find new solutions to awesome old problems of crime.

The doctor says

Everyone needs calcium in diet

In a conversation a dentist told me that calcification occurs with old age and that extra calcium in the diet is not necessary. He stated that milk is not needed past age 19 and that some even suggest stopping milk drinking past age two. He stated that there is enough calcium in the water we drink and in meat and vegetables to satisfy our calcium needs. Any additional calcium will only add to the calcification process.

Since I started making my own breakfast last year at the age of 43, I regularly have about a glass of non-fat dry milk with my natural cereal, a glass of water, and cottage cheese, along with a Dolomite tablet. Am I have too much calcium and encouraging the calcification process?

Fortunately that dentist is not representative of most knowledgeable dentists. I hope you have misquoted him. That is quite a collection of incorrect statements. Everyone over one year old needs from 800 to 1200 milligrams of calcium a day — about the amount found in one quart of milk. Cottage cheese is a good milk substitute for calcium.

Women who are prone to osteoporosis (dissolving b es) with age are five times as likely to have this problem if they are on a calcium deficient diet of the type the dentist apparently thinks is good. The requirements for calcium I have stated here are the Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (RDA) from the Food and Nutrition Board, National Academy of Sciences.

Meat is not a good source of calcium — unless you chew the bones. Perhaps that is what your dentist friend had in mind. Meat is rich in phosphorus, and may actually increase the need for calcium in the diet. The ratio of calcium to phosphorus is important in bone formation.

Not all vegetables are a good source for calcium either; the mature bean seeds and leafy vegetables such as spinach are the only important vegetable sources of calcium. Thus a person can eat lots of other vegetables and meat and still be on a diet seriously deficient in calcium.

I have received many letters from people who mistakenly think that increasing calcium in the diet may increase arthritis and calcification of joints. This is totally untrue and the loss of bone and faulty regeneration of bone is more apt to cause joint and bone damage. The body is designed to eliminate calcium that you don't need and to try to keep what you do need. This is done by controlling how much calcium is actually absorbed from the digestive system, and eliminated through the urine.

There are only a few good dietary sources for calcium. That is one reason milk and milk products must be part of any well balanced diet. To give you more information on what your diet should include, including Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances for food, vitamins and minerals as provided by the National Academy of Sciences. I am sending you The Health Letter number 4-6, Balanced Diet. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to Post Office Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

I do not think you are getting too much calcium. Quite the contrary. Unless you are getting about three glasses of milk a day or its equivalent in cottage chees, you may not be getting enough.

Immediate cleanup saves oven drudgery

If there is any one chore that makes householders wince, it's oven cleaning. Millions of dollars annually go into buying spray cleaners, steel wool, wiping cloths and so forth. I've been as much a victim as anyone and finally have arrived at a pattern that cuts the cleanup drudgery. All it involves is taking care of the oven the moment the food comes out. Regular oven spray goes on all the fresh spills and burned spots and the still-warm oven helps the treatment along. Once dinner is over and the dishes put away, the oven mess is wiped with a wet sponge. If it doesn't come off readily, No. 3 steel wool comes into play and this is followed by a damp sponge cleanup. All told, the business takes only about five minutes and no longer is there any need to set aside a good part of a day every week or two for the hated chore. Try it yourself.

Dear Dorothy: I'd love to put away some of my daughter's better baby garments. There is even a christening dress in the collection. They are all washable—Annette Stratton.

Wash, but don't starch or iron them. Pack in a tight cardboard box and make sure it's securely tied. So long as there are no plastic ornaments on the garments, you can use moth balls or moth crystals. Some of the garments will still yellow, but if they're white and not wool, they can be bleached.

Dear Dorothy: My husband takes me on many of the trips he has to make and after shuddering over the prices of "next-to-nothing" breakfasts, I tote my own — a small jar of instant coffee, some peeling oranges and a small carton of pecan twist rolls. It sounds chinchy, but makes good sense.—Jill C.

Chinchy, my eye. I've been doing it for years. Everybody knows that hotel breakfast charges are almost literally in outer space.

Dear Dorothy: Last year I had a bad experience with a commercial dryer which was set too hot and several polyester pants were wrinkled permanently. Figured nothing more could hurt them to I tried an old-fashioned method to get the creeses out. Wet a cotton cloth, wring it out and put it on a pair of pants, setting the iron for "linen." It worked and the garments were not any the worse for this treatment. We're still wearing them.—Mrs. Leanne Conners.

Weddings

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Chapman

Becky Dalebroux—Bob Chapman

A fall trip to Hawaii is the delayed honeymoon planned by newlyweds Becky and Bob Chapman, who were married May 28 at St. Emily's Catholic Church, Mount Prospect.

Becky is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold D. Dalebroux of Mount Prospect and Bob is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Chapman Jr. of Des Plaines.

They said their vows in a 2:30 p.m. double ring service in which the birde's two sisters, her brother and a cousin and the bridegroom's two sisters participated.

Barb Dalebroux was Becky's maid of honor and Terry Dalebroux and Terri and Robin Chapman were bridesmaids along with Tina LaBellarte of Mount Prospect, and Mary Seidl, Luxenburg, Wis., her cousin.

David Dalebroux ushered and so did Lyle Hineman, Garwin, Iowa, and John Uojja, Mount Prospect. Mark Hineman, Des Plaines, was Bob's best man.

BECKY WORE a Victorian style gown trimmed in lace, and a lace headpiece held her elbow-length veil. A bouquet of white orchids, roses and baby's breath completed her attire.

The attendants were in peach knit with floral capes and carried baskets of white daisies and peach baby's breath.

The reception at Allgauer's Fireside Inn, Northbrook, was attended by 130 guests.

Before settling in their apartment in Glenview, the bridal couple did spend a week in Springfield. Sara's father conducted the service, held at 1:30 in the afternoon, and her sister, Carol, who was her maid of honor, played the flute with harpsichord accompaniment before the ceremony. A college friend of Dave's, Rob Smuts, played trumpet during the processional and recessional.

ANOTHER SISTER of the bride, Ingrid, was a junior bridesmaid along with Connie Dowsett, Moline, and the groom's sister, Cecelia, as senior bridesmaids. All four attendants wore jacketed slip dresses in yellow, carried white and yellow daisies and wore the same color flowers in their hair.

Mark Meves, Mount Prospect, was best man and Mark Beilke, Mount Prospect, and Pat Markham, Mundelein, ushered.

A reception for 100 guests was held at Trinity Lutheran Church in Moline.

ONLY ATTENDANT to the bride was Kathleen Clausen of Woodridge who wore a pale yellow blue and white print gown. Graig Mann was his brother's best man, and ushers were John Bloomfield, brother of the bride, and Chris Fox, Des Plaines.

200 years at the same location.

Maybe folks were a little skeptical about taking stock in America 200 years ago.

We were young. At war. With no experience.

And who knew if we'd ever pay back the money?

Well, 200 years have passed. And the U.S. government has always paid in full. To the penny.

Now that's not a bad record.

In fact, you might say we're now a pretty well-established outfit to do business with.

So join the Payroll Savings Plan and save with today's Bicentennial issue of Series E Savings Bonds. It's easy. It's automatic.

And it's safe. After 200 years, you know we're here to stay.

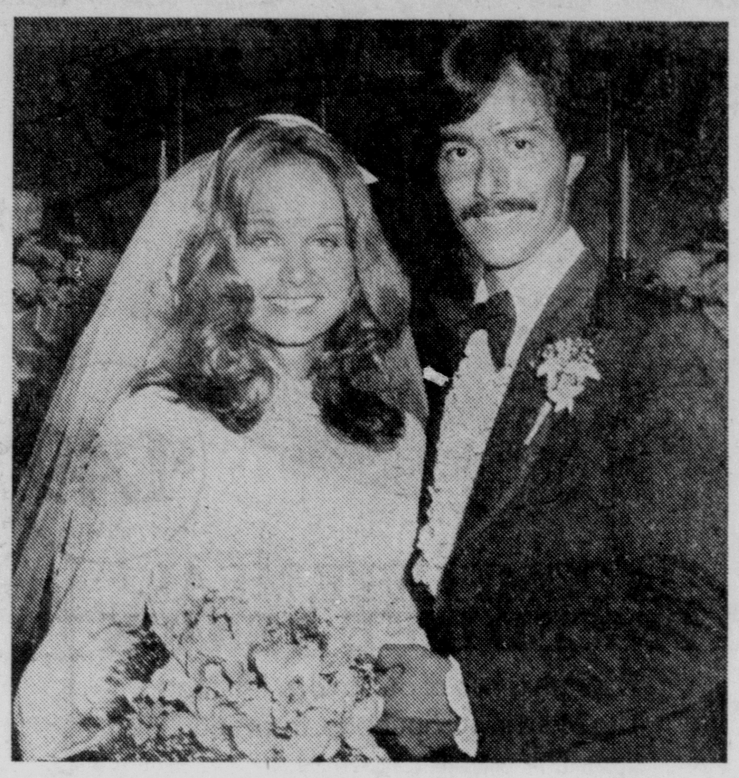

Now E Bonds pay 6% interest when held to maturity of 5 years (4% the first year). Lost, stolen or destroyed Bonds can be replaced if records are provided. When needed, Bonds can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

Take stock in America.

Kathleen Collins-Scott A. Hase

Mr. and Mrs. Scott A. Hase

Kathleen Anita Collins and Scott Alan Hase, who dated through three years at Prospect High, went on to different colleges and then resumed their friendship after graduation, were married May 29 in Southminster Presbyterian Church.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wiley Collins, Arlington Heights, Kathy and Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hase, Glencoe, were married in a 4:30 p.m. double ring service followed by a reception for 200 in The Barn of Barrington.

Kathy is third grade teacher at Ender-Salk Elementary School in Schaumburg so the couple postponed their two-week honeymoon in London, until school was out. They are now residing in Lexington Green.

Kathy wore the same gown her sister wore four years ago, an antique ivory peau de soie with lace bodice. Her full-length veil was attached to a lace cap, and she carried cream colored orchids and stephanotis.

IN SOFT PINK Empire gowns with jackets were her attendants. Her sister, Cynthia Paturalski, Palatine, was matron of honor, and her sisters, Cheryl and Carol, and the groom's sisters, Linda and Nancy, were bridesmaids. They carried pink carnations and maroon roses with baby's breath.

Craig Hutchison, Madison, Wis., was best man, and ushers were Dean Johnson, Edwardsville, Ill., and Jim Van Horn, South Somerville, N.J., Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity brothers of the groom; Dave Kruger, Mount Prospect; and the bride's brother-in-law, Tom Paturalski.

Kathy studied at Western Illinois and Indiana University, her bridegroom at Valparaiso in Indiana. Scott is a sales representative for National Wax Co., Skokie.

'Soap' no wishy-washy fall comedy

LOS ANGELES—It's about three months before ABC's new and bold comedy "Soap" starts, and it already is the topic of much heated discussion.

The show is daring because it catches all of America with its pants down in an embarassing situation.

It stops at nothing in the name of parody and fun — adultry, divorce, death, homosexuality, the Mafia, race and war.

The comedy is so blatent in dialog that, if widely accepted by primetime audiences, it would pave the way for a new set of standards and practices for all of television.

"We're waiting to see how 'Soap' is accepted and just what the audience reaction is to the dialog, the term and the topics. If people accept it on a regular basis and don't mind it, it's going to make a big difference in future programming," said Van Gordon Sauter, vice president of program practices for CBS.

"SOAP" PRODUCER SUSAN HARRIS argues that her show does not delve into any new areas of human behavior or lifestyle that television hasn't already addressed in other series or movies.

Never have so many sensitive and controversial topics and tones been raised in the same, on-going serial. That is what will make "Soap" different from anything ever seen before on television. That is why it will have a unique impact on television viewers.

"Soap," saturated in sex and taboos, makes "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" look like a Saturday morning cartoon. Since it already has become the most controversial new show of the fall season, it is bound to become the most watched.

When questioned about her innovative product and her brush in the past with controversial television scripts for shows like "Fay" and "Maude," Ms. Harris was most defensive.

"I don't think the show will set a precedent. I don't think you'll see anything new on 'Soap' that you haven't seen already on 'Maude' or the 6 o'clock news," she said.

MS. HARRIS DENIES REPORTS that the network has said it wants to approve any interviews she does on the new show in advance, or that there are attempts being made to downplay preseason publicity on "Soap." ABC officials also have denied the reports.

However, James E. Duffy, president of the ABC television network, said that provisions are being made to allow affiliate stations (which operated autonomously but carry network programming) to schedule "Soap" as late into primetime as possible to avoid viewer protest. Some affiliate stations will refuse to run the series because of opposition to the content.

"The Tidings," the official weekly publication of the Los Angeles Archdiocese, took issue with the new series this week in a front page editorial charging that is is a degenerate move to make money by characterizing promiscuous couples, a transvestite son, permissive daughters — one of which will attempt to seduce a Jesuit priest in church.

The network reportedly has received letters of concern from viewers who have been reading such news paper reports of the show.

THE GENERAL CONCERN is that if "Soap" proves a success, it will inspire a new trend of such shows. There is also concern over the shock value of "Soap."

The viewer barely has time to survive from hearing a black butler called "chocolate face" by a shell-shocked old man who still is fighting the war in his own mind, before he sees a mother and daughter sharing the same lover.

WARREN BEATTY

Ms. Harris said that she feels her show is being misunderstood and taken too seriously. While the network is billing "Soap" as an "outrageous comedy," Ms. Harris is insisting that it's not that outrageous and new at all.

"The intent is not to shock but to entertain," said Ms. Harris who disagrees with many who say her characters are sterotypes and the dialog predictable.

She and her writing staff will be meeting regularly with ABC's standards and practices officials although Ms. Harris doesn't believe there will be any unreasonable restrictions placed on her show.

Meanwhile, all of the television industry and ABC's two rival networks are watching closely as "Soap" moves into the spotlight. Whether people find the show revolting or entertaining, there will be reaction. And, it will be that reaction that determines what permissive levels television will allow in the future.

TV NOTES:

Gene Roddenberry, who created the original "Star Trek," which is successful in reruns now, will be executive producer of the remake of that show, which will be produced by Paramount Pictures. The series, which originally ran on NBC from 1966-69, will be aired in the fall. Roddenberry plans to bring back many of the show's regulars. "Trek" is part of Paramount's new plan to provide independent stations with first-run programming.

TV HIGHLIGHTS:

Warren Beatty and Julie Christie star in Robert Altman's western "McCabe and Mrs. Miller" at 8 p.m. on Channel 2. The two, a small-time gambler and an ambitious hooker, ran the most thriving business in town — a bordello.

Merit Cigarette Sets New Taste Standard.

Tests confirm low tar MERIT delivers flavor of higher tar cigarettes.

There is a way to get real taste from a cigarette without high tar.

Technology created it.

Taste tests proved it.

Smokers are confirming it. In fact, 75% of all MERIT smokers are former high tar cigarette smokers—the toughest taste critics of low tar smoking.

MERIT—the cigarette packed with 'Enriched Flavor'™ tobacco—seems to be solving the smoker dilemma of having to choose between high tar or low taste.

If you smoke, you'll be interested.

No progress in vault strike

Burial vault production workers continue their strike in the Chicago area, following the unsuccessful bargaining session Tuesday between Teamsters Local 786 officials and representatives of four local vault manufacturing firms. Federal mediator Samuel Mazza, who met with union and company officials Tuesday, said he "will be calling them together again shortly." Little progress was made during the 2½ hours of contract talks Tuesday, Mazza said. Funerals have been delayed by some Chicago area funeral directors during the strike, which began June 8. American Wilbert Vault Corp., which has a plant at 165 N. River Rd., Des Plaines, is among the manufacturers affected by the strike.

Durable goods orders rise slightly

New orders for durable goods rose a moderate 0.5 per cent in May, the third advance in four months, the Commerce Dept. said Tuesday. The increase represented a rebound from the revised 0.7 per cent decline in April but was well off the strong 7.5 per cent advance registered in March. New orders for durables are viewed by economists as a key economic indicator because they represent demands on manufacturers to increase production and job opportunities for the unemployed are expanded. The orders index had increased 0.4 per cent in February after a dip in January. The Commerce Dept. said the May advance was fueled by a strong increase in the primary metals sector. This offset declines in transportation equipment and nondefense capital goods.

Ford to recall '72 cars

Ford Motor Co. said Tuesday it will complete a mailing of 425,000 recall notices today to owners of 1972 cars with potentially dangerous radiator fans. Officials said they also are investigating reports of trouble with the flexible fan blades on six million 1970-1977 models. But only 1972 Lincolns, Torinos and Montegos with V-8 engines are subject to the current recall. Company and federal officials have received reports on 200 incidents in which the fan broke. The failure caused the death of a Monroe, Mich., mechanic and injury to 13 other persons.

GM charges grand jury misuse

General Motors attorneys charged Tuesday that the Internal Revenue Service used a grand jury investigation of alleged tax fraud to give itself powers Congress was not willing to bestow on the tax agency. "The IRS has grandiose ideas about what it can do," GM attorney George Moscarino said. "The IRS believes the grand jury is their information gathering tool." GM's accusations came during a federal court hearing into motions filed by the world's largest auto company after the jury was in session for less than three hours in April. GM asked U. S. District Judge James P. Churchill to quash subpoenas issued by the jury on grounds the panel was being used illegally by the IRS.

New Merrill Lynch account

Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith said Tuesday it will test a new type of brokerage account giving interest on the account's cash balance and allowing charges and borrowing through the Visa bank card. The nation's largest brokerage said its new cash management account will be introduced in Atlanta, Denver and Columbus, Ohio, in September and expanded nationwide if the tests succeed. 'Cash Management Account will enable investors for the first time to have convenient and instant access to all their money, investments and ready borrowing power in their brokerage account, while earning a reasonable return on their funds," Merrill Lynch chairman Donald J. Regan said. CNA combines existing brokerage and banking services into a new package. The services include margin accounts, a money management fund, Visa bank cards and Visa check drafts. A margin account allows a qualified investor to borrow up to half the value of his securities held by his brokerage. Under CMA, Merrill Lynch said it would take cash in the margin account from a stock sale or dividend payment, for example, and invest it in shares of a new money market fund.

U.S Steel chief raps energy plan

A national business spokesman criticized President Carter's energy policy Tuesday, calling it one sided and "an open invitation to a new wave of governmental taxes and controls." R. Heath Larry, chairman of the National Assn. of Manufacturers, said President Carter's energy advisers "should go back to the drawing board and come up with a national energy plan that will really work." Larry, Vice Chairman of U. S. Steel Corp., said the present plan would ignore incentives for greater energy production in the United States and make the country even more dependent on foreign oil producers. "The most effective method for both increasing energy supply and reducing energy demand is to allow the price of energy to be set in a manner free of excessive government controls," he said.

Meditation becoming businessman's tool for increased effectiveness

by LEA TONKIN

When the pressures of being an insurance company executive become too much for Roy Anderson, he just sits back, closes his eyes and meditates those cares away.

Anderson says he is convinced his twice-daily meditation sessions have eased his high blood pressure and he would like to believe it helps his on-the-job performance.

"There really is no question in my mind that everyone would be better off with a training course," Anderson says of the Transcendental Meditation study which enabled him to learn the meditation technique.

AS VICE PRESIDENT of strategic planning for Allstate Insurance Companies, Northbrook, Anderson makes it his business to study trends affecting business and society in general.

Anderson is slated to speak Thursday at a seminar entitled "Progress and Consciousness." Geared to business and community leaders, the meeting is planned by the International Meditation Society as an introduction to its TM programs.

MEDITATION CAN lead to improved on-the-job performance, says Transcendental Meditation technique promoter Jack Gaynor.

Attorney Bill Farber and pharmaceutical sales representative John Puffer of Schaumburg also will discuss the means for improving human relations, says society spokesman Jack Gaynor. The session will start at 7:30 p.m. in the Palatine Public Library, Palatine.

Meditators create an improved mental state, Gaynor said. Using the TM technique, they enter a deep state of rest accompanied by mental alertness.

THE RESULT OF A daily meditation routine is improved performance and well-being which can mean increased productivity and effectiveness at work Gaynor said.

Gaynor, a former systems analyst in the computer field, says managers and their employes need relief from tension "in a stressful, changing, dynamic world."

Companies that have adopted TM programs for their employes report increased productivity, decreased absenteeism, and a generally better operation, he said.

The reduction of stress and tension leads to increased creativity, Gaynor adds. "Healthier, happier employes will make a business a success. You're working with your full potential," he said.

Gaynor insists there's no way the fringe benefits of a daily TM routine can be achieved by reading a book on the subject or listening to others describe the technique. A Society for Creative Intelligence course, taught by a qualified instructor, will do the job, he said.

There is, of course, a price to pay for enhanced creativity and human potential. Although TM course fees vary according to the size of the study group, a six-week study course for managers is priced at $360 per person. An employe program starts at $165 per person. Lower prices are set for larger study groups.

National index climbed .6%

Consumer prices up .3% here

Chicago area consumer prices rose .3 per cent during May, despite a decline in food prices, the Illinois Dept. of Labor reported Tuesday.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Labor Dept. said the national consumer price index climbed .6 per cent during the month. The May increase in U.S. consumer prices is equivalent to a 7.4 per cent annual rate, compared to previous 1977 price hikes averaging a 10 per cent annual rate.

The .3 consumer price hike in Illinois amounts to a 6.5 per cent annual increase in the cost of living, the state Dept. of Labor said. The price index of 189 compares to 1967 prices, used as a base of 100 points. This means that goods and services which cost $100 in 1967 now cost $189.

DECLINES IN Chicago area food, womens' and girls' apparel and bakery goods prices were offset by increased transportation, medical care, mens' and boys' apparel costs during May.

In the first five months of 1977, American consumers have endured accelerated price increases of .6 per cent in March and May, .8 per cent in January and April, and 1 per cent in February.

Food and fuel prices have been largely responsible for the surge. But administration economists predict these prices will ease in the months ahead, allowing inflation to cool to a 6.5 per cent annual rate by the end of 1977.

Already in May there was evidence that food and fuel prices are no longer increasing faster than other goods. One Commerce Dept. analyst described it as "some cause for optimism."

HE SAID MAY'S overall .6 per cent increase was "getting back to a more decent rate — a demonstration of what happens when we don't have those big increases in food and fuel."

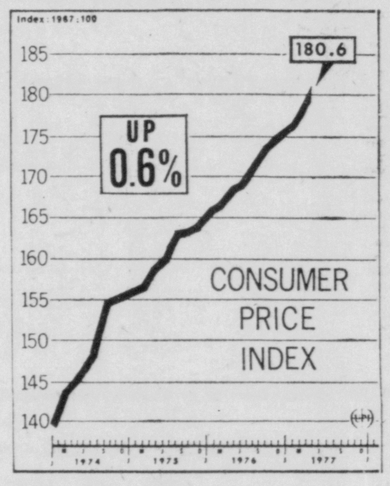

Food prices rose .7 per cent in May, less than half the rate during April. Although coffee prices continued to climb 10.3 per cent, vegetables dropped 13.5 per cent.

Gasoline, fuel oil and coal rose a moderate .8 per cent. All nonfood commodities were up .4 per cent for the third straight month, and service costs rose .7 per cent.

The Consumer Price Index stood at 180.6 in May, reflecting a 6.7 per cent increase over the past year. This means that goods and services costing $100 in 1967, have increased by $80.60 over the past decade.

Wholesale food prices declined in May, but they are slow to affect the retail market. For example, consumers probably will not enjoy a recent decline in wholesale coffee prices until the old, high-priced coffee has been sold.

Retail prices declined in May for fruits, eggs, and beef. But prices rose for poultry, dairy products, fats, oils, pork and sugar.

CONSUMER PRICES rose .6 per cent in the United States during May, as the consumer price index increased .3 per cent in the Chicago area.

Edison: no fear of power lack

Northern Illinois residents can expect electric utilities to have adequate power to supply all their air conditioning needs, says Commonwealth Edison Co. spokesman Bill Harrah.

"There's always that possibility" of a voltage reduction, or brownout, Harrah concedes. "There's no such thing as a sure thing," he said, adding that the utility has a 14.5 per cent reserve generating capacity to meet additional power demand.

The utility's reserve capacity previously was estimated at 20 per cent. Energy levels in the fuel rods at Commonwealth Edison's nuclear plants declined because of heavier-than-normal usage last winter when fuel deliveries to coal-fired plants were curtailed, Harrah said.

THE PEAK USE of electric power generally comes in July or August. That's when the reserve generating capacity is important, especially if there are operating difficulties at any generating stations, Harrah said.

"We generally give everyone a chance to get their air conditioning installed and working, then wait for a stretch of three or four really hot days," Harrah said. The heaviest use of electric power by Commonwealth Edison customers during 1976 came on July 14, when a peak of 12,907,000 kilowatts of power were used. Harrah said this summer's peak demand approximately will reach 13,900,000 kilowatts of power.

Commonwealth Edison belongs to a power-sharing network, Harrah said. The Mid America Interpool Network, a group of 16 Midwest utilities has a 21½ per cent power reserve to accommodate emergency power demands.

If the MAIN network cannot supply enough electric power to meet the customers' demands, Commonwealth Edison will reduce voltage by 2½ per cent, then 5 per cent. "Then if things start getting really hairy after that," large steel firms will be asked to reduce their power usage, Harrah said. The next step is a request for a voluntary cutback in the public's use of power.

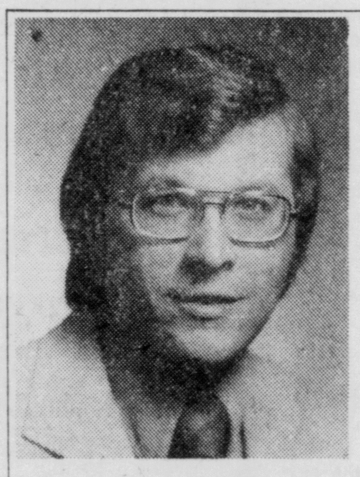

IF ALL ELSE fails, a load shedding process will be launched. Commonwealth Edison has not had to use this system of rotating blackouts — power cutoffs — among service areas, Harrah said.

Consumers are urged to check energy efficiency ratios on home air conditioners and other electric appliances, Harrah said. The higher the ratio, the better the fuel economy of the appliance.

An EER of at least 8 is recommended for home air conditioners, Harrah said. It is the appliance rating for British Thermal Units (BTU's) divided by the number of watts. Reduced fuel bills are the consumer's interest in looking for energy efficient appliances, Harrah said.

Peak power usage is used to calculate the need for new power generating capacity. Any reduction in the peak load will mean potential savings in the cost of new construction programs, Harrah said.

Summer job worth more in new tax law

NEW YORK — If your son or daughter has an after-school or summer job, it's going to be worth a lot more to him this year. The new tax law has increased the amount of money he can earn without paying income taxes. That's a saving not only for the youngster but for you, if you're counting on the child's income to help pay for college or contribute to expenses around the house.

A single person now can earn up to $3,200 without paying any federal income taxes. That's 25 per cent more than he was allowed to earn tax-free just two years ago.

The new $2,200 standard deduction accounts for a good part of the increase. Another big saving is the general tax credit, just extended by Congress for another year. The remainder comes from the familiar $750 personal exemption.

IF YOUR CHILD didn't pay income taxes last year and doesn't expect to this year, either, he can arrange not to have any tax money withheld from his paycheck. He does this by filing the tax-withholding form W-4E with his employer, rather than the usual form W-4. The employer may have this form himself; if not, you can get one from any Internal Revenue Service office.

It's well worth your time and trouble to get one of these forms. By eliminating withholding, it puts more money into your child's pocket right now. It also may save him the trouble of filing a tax return next April.

If a youngster makes $2,950 or less this year, he wouldn't normally have to file a tax return. However, if taxes were withheld from his paycheck, he'll have to file to get the refund.

If he makes more than $2,950, he has to file a tax return even if no taxes are due. But as long as the deductions and tax credits wipe out all his tax liability, as they will if his earnings were $3,200 or less, he's still eligible to avoid tax withholding through form W-4E.

Jane Bryant Quinn

Staying ahead

EMPLOYERS WHO HIRE young persons might make a note about these forms and keep a stack on hand. It's something you can do to make your employes' take-home checks a little fatter without cost to yourself.

When young people are filling their own tax returns and taking their own personal exemptions, parents sometimes think they can no longer deduct those children on the family tax return. But that'd not so. You can take a $750 deduction (plus a general tax credit) for every child less than 19, or any child more than 19 who is a full-time student, as long as you provide more than one-half of his or her support.

This holds true even if the child is working in your business and you're deducting his salary as a business expense. In that case, you'd get the business deduction plus the personal exemption on your own tax return; the child would get the personal exemption and standard deduction on his or her own tax return.

But no matter how little a youngster makes, he can't escape withholding for Social Security. If an employer pays him more than $50 during a three-month period, 5.85 per cent of it goes to Social Security. The emplIyer makes a matching contribution.

Because of this reporting duty, employers seldom hire young persons who don't have a Social Security card. If your child doesn't yet have one and expects to work this summer, be sure the child applies right away, because it may take three or four weeks for the card to come through. If a mistake has been made, it may take another two weeks to correct it. There's no fee involved.

Some young persons resent social Security deductions, and even may ask the employer (if it's an individual, or a very small company) not to pay it. That's a mistake. A person's eligibility for benefits — for example, disability benefits if he should be hit with a crippling disease or an accident — depends on how long he's paid into the system. The sooner eligibility is established, the better.

Dow up 4.33 in economy optimism

NEW YORK (UPI) — Stocks rose along a broad front Tuesday in the second heaviest trading day of the year in reaction to indications inflation had slowed a bit.

The Labor Dept.'s report that May's Consumer Price Index rose at a 7.2 per cent annual rate, down from 9.6 per cent in April, triggered the heavy buying by institutions.

In addition, Wall Street, although somewhat uncertain about the future, hailed signs of the economy's present strength. Revised government figures Monday showed the first quarter Gross National Product climbed 6.9 per cent and corporate profits jumped 5.1 per cent.

The Commerce Dept. reported Tuesday that May durable goods orders rose .5 per cent after falling .7 per cent in April. However, orders for nondefense items were down .7 per cent and nondefense shipments were off .3 per cent. The nondefense sector is considered most important by many analysts.

Against this background, the Dow Jones industrial average, a 3.82-point winner Monday, climbed another 4.33 points to 928.60, the highest level since it closed at 930.46 on May 20. It had been ahead nearly six points before late profit taking trimmed the gain.

THE CLOSELY watched industrial average, which gained 9.66 points last week, has been lagging the rest of the market lately. The Dow Jones utilities average, for instance, reached a new 1977 high of 115.64 with a gain of 1.38.

The New York Stock Exchange common stock index rose 0.19 to 55.09 and the average price of a share gained 12 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some over-the-counter issues, added 0.32 to 100.74.

Advances topped declines, 880 to 564, among the 1,920 issues crossing the composite tape.

The big story was volume. The Big Board turnover of 29,730,000 shares, up from the 22,950,000 traded Monday, was the heaviest since 30,493,592 shares changed hands April 14.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. markets and over the counter totaled 34,279,890 shares, compared with 26,103,410 Monday.

Sony Corp. was the most active NYSE issue, off ¼ to 9¼ following block trades of 300,000 shares at 9-3/8, 250,000 shares at 9¼, 242,700 at 9-1/8 and 150,000 at 9-1/8.

Movie stocks, big gainers recently, felt profit taking pressures for the second consecutive session. Twentieth Century-Fox, which lost a point Monday, was the second most active issue, losing another 1 to 22¼. Columbia pictures eased 5/8 to 14¼ in active trading.

Top 100 firms' executives see 17% hike in pay

NEW YORK (UPI) — Top executives of the nation's 100 biggest industrial companies earned 17 per cent more last year than 1975 and had median earnings of $420,000 compared with $357,800 the year before, a management consulting firm said.

Towers, Perrin Forster & Crosby also said more companies are rewarding their executives for attaining long-term business goals.

The median pay for the No. 2 executives in the top 100 companies rose to $293,700 in 1976, up almost 20 per cent from a year earlier and the third ranking executives received median earnings of $237,200, an increase of almost 16 per cent, according to TPF & C.

The firm describes earnings as total cash compensation, which includes bonuses in addition to annual salary.

It said that chief executive officers benefited from their companies' improved profits last year as the median bonus paid to the top executives was almost 60 per cent of their regular salary.

Stock options remain the most popular form of long term incentive used by corporations and the number of companies in the top 100 offering performance related awards rose to 26 from four in 1973, TPF & C said.

BUILD YOUR CAREER WITH US

We are a unique company doing unique things. This includes our approach to hiring. Instead of limiting our search to persons with product or industry knowledge, we attempt to locate the best salesperson available, whose past performance and future goals match ours. We then thoroughly train that person in our markets, products and technology. Makes sense, doesn't it? So does our approach to marketing, salaries, incentive compensation, territories, benefits, promotions and other factors. If you have a record of success in tangible sales but feel limited in your current situation, let's talk. Our entire business is involved with concrete, and exciting, versatile, low cost building material. We have a Northern Chicago territory available and are currently scheduling local interviews.

Strong field gathers at Western Open

by JEFF NORDLUND

Defending champion Al Geiberger and U. S. Open winner Hubert Green will be teeing off Thursday at the beginning of the Western Open in suburban Oak Brook as part of one of the best fields in recent Western history.

The old complaint the biggest names in golf always skip the Western won't be true this year with recent Western Open winners Tommy Watson (1974) and Hale Irwin (1975), and Tom Weiskopf, Johnny Miller and Arnold Palmer also playing.

But at Butler, the three-year home of one of the oldest golf championships in the country, there is another star — the course. Every one of the 156 golfers will compete against themselves and the 7,002 yard course.

DESPITE THE STRONG field, it will take a combination of ideal conditions and superb golf to keep a four-round total under par. Only one golfer has managed to crack par at Butler in three years of Western play, Irwin in 1975.

Irwin's one-under 283 total was five strokes better than what Geiberger used in winning last year's championship. Geiberger's total was the highest winning score on the tour in 1976.

Although Geiberger is the defending champion and recently posted an all-time tour low for an 18-hole score with 59 at Colonial Country Club in Memphis, Tenn., the biggest interest this week may be in Green.

Green landed the first major tour victory of his career last week by winning the U. S. Open over the treacherous Southern Hills Golf Club in Tulsa, Okla. He finished just a stroke ahead of a charging Lou Graham.

THIS WILL BE Green's fourth Western Open, having tied for fourth at Midlothian Country Club in 1973 in his previous best finish. He has earned $8,538.34 in his three starts.

Green tied for 34th in his last appearance at the Western when he shot a 12-over 296 at Butler in 1975. Green erased the possibility of a golfer winning the seemingly impossible Grand Slam of golf this year.

Masters champion Watson won the year's first leg of the Slam with the British Open and PGA events still to come later this summer.

As was true at the U. S. Open last week, the course is sure to get nearly as much publicity as the players, and there will be probably be some criticism levelled at the George Fazio-designed layout.

SEVERAL SMALL changes have been made on the course since last year, but they are relatively minor. Still, host pro Errie Ball, who will be playing in the tournament, is confident there will be less criticism than in the past.

Ball said the grass in the fairways is maturing and is not yielding as many "fliers" as before. Also, with familiarity will come lower scores, he added.

"We've taken out underbrush on most of the holes," Ball said, "and on the 14th, we've lifted a trap so the players can see it better, and we filled in about half of it, so they'll be in the rough instead of the sand. Then on 18 we filled in a ditch on the left side so there isn't as much danger of going into the water with a hook.

"I think the scores will be more stable. I think there'll be more scores around par and there could be quite a few rounds in the 60's. The fairways are better and the greens hold much better. I don't think the field will rip it up, but there won't be as many scores over 75."

THE FIELD WILL be cut after Friday's round, and play will be continued through Sunday. Should there be a tie, the championship will be settled by a sudden-death playoff immediately following the conclusion of Sunday's round.

Many of the biggest names in the field of 154 professionals and two amateurs will play in a pro-am tournament today. One of the amateurs playing this year is Gary Hallberg of Barrington. The 19-year-old Wake Forest sophomore recently captured the North-South Amateur championship.

An even dozen players who have won tour victories this season are in the Western field. They are, in addition to Green (open), Geiberger (Memphis), Watson (San Diego and Masters) and Irwin (Atlanta Classic), Bruce Lietzke (Tucson and Hawaiian opens), Rich Massengale (Hope Classic), Tom Purtzer (Los Angeles), Gary Koch (Citrus), Andy Bean (Doral), Mark Hayes (Tournament Players Championship), Danny Edwards (Greensboro) and Jim Simons (New Orleans).

Sox triumph, erupt early against Ryan

by BOB GALLAS

"It's not how you hit 'em. It's where you hit 'em," explained White Sox centerfielder Ralph Garr.

The Sox, despite just three hits off California pitcher Nolan Ryan, held on to first in the American league West Tuesday night as they proved Garr correct with a 3-2 win over the Angels at Comiskey Park.

Garr's third inning single that just barely got out of the infield helped the Sox take advantage of Ryan's walking the bases full and brought in two runs. A moment later Alan Bannister blooped a single to right and brought in another run that finished the Sox rally — for the night. But that was enough as the South Siders got a brilliant effort from Steve Stone who picked up his eighth win of the season with relief help from — who else — Lerrin LaGrow.

THE SOX GOT the three runs in the third before Ryan had recorded his first strikeout. By the end of the eighth, Ryan had struck out nine and hadn't allowed another hit.

"The only way you get three runs off of Ryan is to bunch those hits around walks," said manager Bob Lemon. "Sometimes you never get started aginst him."

While Ryan had his league-leading strikeout pitch working after the third, Stone likewise had the Angels whiffing, setting down seven on strikeouts in 7 2/3 innings while allowing just five hits.

"I used the fastball to get ahead (of the hitters) and the curve for the strikeout pitch," Stone said. The right-hander was sailing along beautifully until the eighth when California put two men in via a walk and a single after two out. Stone got the quick hook, but couldn't have been happier.

"BOB (LEMON) has had an uncanny knack for knowing when to take me out," said Stone, now 8-5 on the season. "Tonight I didn't say a thing but he knew right away I was through."

It took LaGrow just one pitch to bail Stone out of hot water in the eighth as Mario Guerrero flied to center to retire the side. LaGrow, who picked up his 12th save and fourth in the past six days, probably wished he'd thrown a few more pitches in that inning.

"I wasn't loose coming in and it was my fault. They told me to be ready," explained the big right-hander. LaGrow opened the ninth by serving up a "no nothing" fastball to Dave Chalk for a home run that tightened the score at 3-2. But he loosened up enough after that to retire the next three in order.

Ryan, now 9-7, was again plagued by walks, passing six as he nevertheless went the distance for California. He has now walked 108 in 145 innings, which takes some of the gloss off the 30-year-old righthander's 176 strikeouts, an average of 10 per game.

HE STILL HAD the Sox off balance with a tantalizing mixture of pitches. None of the Sox three hits were crushers. Bannister's first inning hit bounced off Ryan and never left the infield while his second single didn't go much farther. Likewise with Garr.

Manager Lemon has been talking up the Sox depth all season, but the point was driven home Tuesday as three Sox regulars were scratched from the starting lineup due to injuries and their replacements performed well.

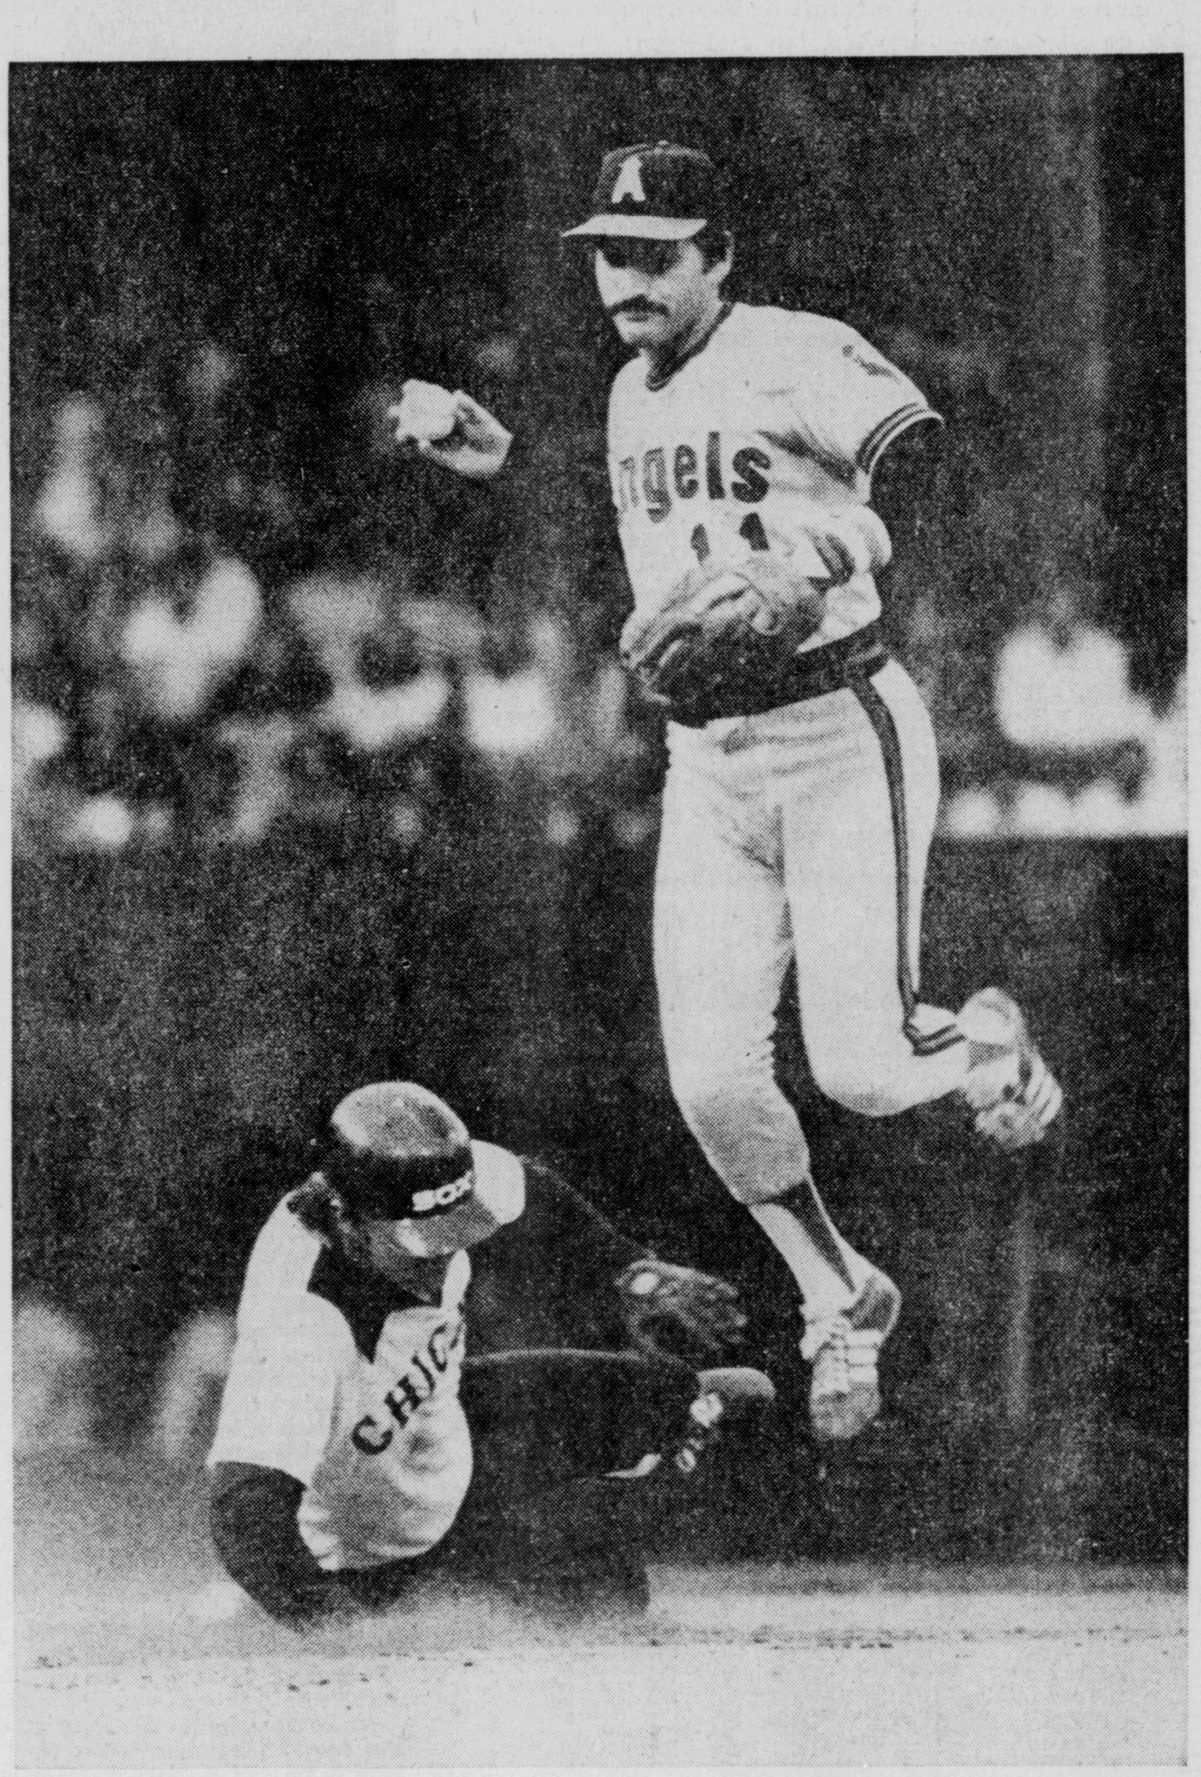

Kevin Bell, Richie Zisk and Lamar Johnson all sat out the game. Bell's left knee is badly swollen from a collision at the plate Monday with Oakland's Manny Sanguillen and he may be out a week or more. Zisk is still plagued with a sore heel and Johnson was hit in the face with a ground ball during batting practice Tuesday and suffered a swollen eye.

Since Jim Spencer is still on the disabled list with a broken toe, the Sox had no first basemen per se, but Royle Stillman, with only a handful of games under his belt at first, stepped in and performed flawlessly, including a nice catch of a pop foul as he stepped into the California dugout. Oscar Gamble went from designated hitter to right field. Jack Brohamer served as DH and Eric Soderholm held down third base in the shuffle.

THE ANGELS, too, were hurting as two-thirds of their multi-million dollar package was out of the lineup. Bobby Grich is still on the disabled list with a bad back and Joe Rudi, despite being moved to designated hitter, had to leave after the first inning because of a pulled leg muscle he suffered during batting practice.

The Sox did nothing to improve the league's .192 batting average against Ryan, going 3-for-27 as a team Tuesday, a .111 average. They have beaten Ryan twice this year, though.

The series continues tonight as Ken Brett will face his ex mates for the first time since being traded last week.

LEAPING TO AVOID the sliding Alan Bannister of the White Sox is California's shortstop Mario Guerrero. Bannister drove in a key run Tuesday night as the Sox trimmed the Angels and Nolan Ryan, 3-2, and held their slim lead in the American League West. (Photo by Mike Seeling)

Player keeps the faith, but may lose a position

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Danny Thomas, the 26-year-old first baseman-outfielder who refuses to play on the sabbath for religious reasons, has been ordered to do so by the Milwaukee Brewers or else leave the team's farm club.

Thomas, who is now playing for the Spokane Indians in the Pacific Coast League, says his religious convictions prevent him from working sundown Friday to sundown Saturday. His religion is the World Wide Church of God.

Thomas missed Spokane's Friday night and Saturday afternoon games with Albuquerque because of his religious observance.

THOMAS, nicknamed the "Sundown Kid," says he plans to keep the faith, which means he will be suspended when he refuses to play next Friday in Albuquerque.

"They're my bosses and they have that right," said Thomas. "I don't feel any hostility. I feel thankful for the opportunity Milwaukee has given me. It's a fine organization with good, young talent."

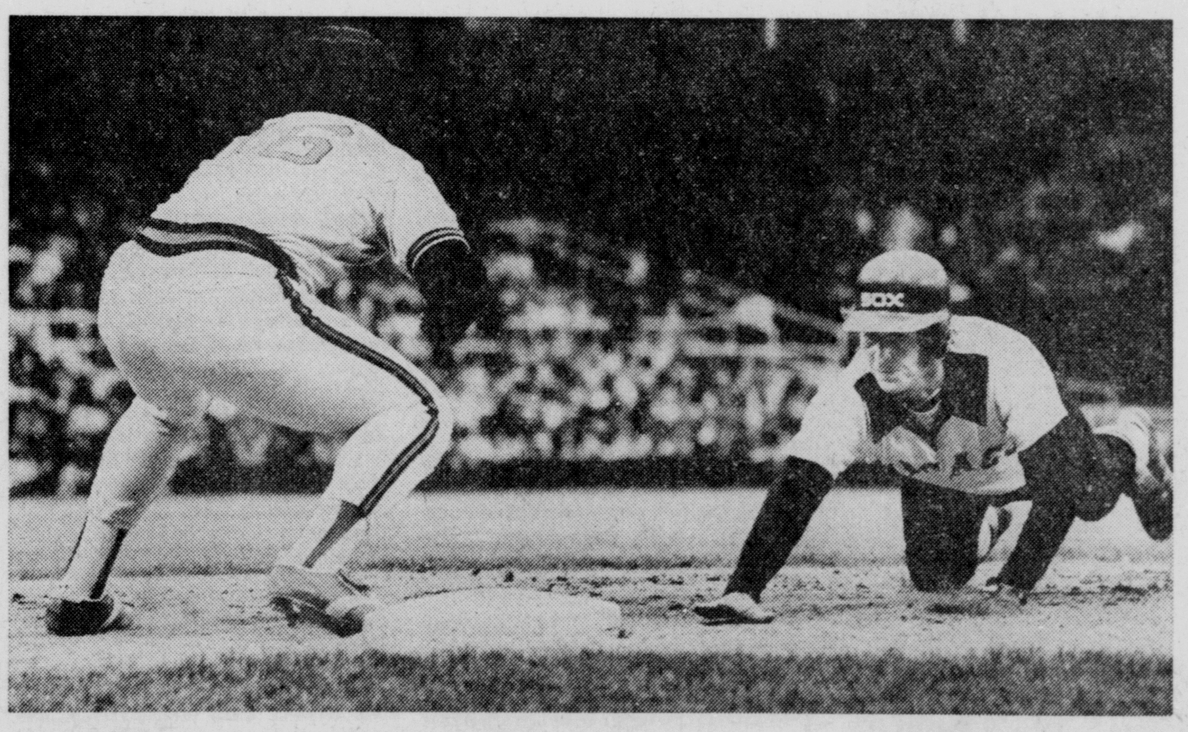

Thomas was kept off the roster in 1976 with an injury but hit .325 while leading the Eastern League with 29 home runs to go along with 83 runs batted in. He was named the AA circuit's "player of the year" for his efforts.

THEN HE JOINED the church during the winter and vowed to keep the sabbath sacred by not playing.

He started the season with Milwaukee, hitting over .300 early. But the days off apparently took their toll as his average slipped to .271 when he was sent to Spokane.

Thomas said if he's sent packing, he will not fight the decision.

A recent Supreme Court ruling would probably take care of any litigation Thomas might have. The high court ruled last week that an employer does not have to honor special religious holiday requests from employes.

THAT MAN AGAIN. Alan Bannister, who spent some time in the dirt again Tuesday night, dives back to first on pickoff attempt. Taking the throw is California's Ronnie Jackson. The Sox won, 3-2. (Photo by Mike Seeling)

Cubs' lead now 6½ games with 8-2 win over Giants

SAN FRANCISCO — The Cubs, behind a 10-hit attack, ripped the San Francisco Giants for the second night in a row, 8-2, Tuesday.

The victory, coupled with a Philadelphia loss, moved the Cubs' National League East lead back to 6½ games.

THE WINNING pitcher was Mike Krukow, now 6-4, although he needed relief help in the seventh from Steve Renko, who was taken off the disabled list only Tuesday. Renko earned a save by pitching the final three innings without allowing a baserunner.

Krukow was hit in the leg by a line-drive single off the bat of pinch-hitter Jack Clark in the sixth and hobbled around for a couple of moments before continuing to pitch. A batter later, Bill Madlock lined to right and Clark, who was off with the pitch, was easily doubled up.

Poor San Francisco fielding but even poorer pitching contributed to an early 6-0 Cubs' lead after just two innings. Giant starter John Curtis was to right sending DeJesus to third.

Five Cub runs crossed the plate in the second inning and they were all charged to Curtis, but the wildness of Lynn McGlothen, pitching in relief, had a lot to do with it.

THE INNING OPENED with Manny Trillo rifling a hit to center field. Steve Ontiveros followed with a pop-fly, Astroturf-bounce double to right field that three Giants converged on but none could reach as Trillo advanced to third. Then Steve Swisher doubled to the warning track in right on a ball that San Francisco outfielder Terry Whitfield had in his range. Two runs scored on the play.

Krukow beat out a bunt for a base hit while trying to sacrifice and DeJesus followed with an RBI single that sent Swisher home. By that time, Giant manager Joe Altobelli had seen enough of lefthander Curtis.

But McGlothen wasn't the answer, either. The big righthander faced three batters and walked them all, throwing 12 pitches, all out of the strike zone. He also unleashed three wild pitches, two of them allowing Krukow and DeJesus to score.

With the bases loaded and no outs, Altobelli called on Dave Heaverlo to put out the fire, even though the damage had been done. Heaverlo retired the next three batters and the Cubs stranded three runners.

THE CUBS finally got to Heaverlo in the fourth when Buckner slammed a solo homer over the fence in right field. It was the first home run as a Cub for the gimpy lefthanded hitter. An inning later, Ontiveros hit his third homer of the year for an 8-0 lead.

Krukow coasted through the first three innings without yielding a hit, although DeJesus made a pair of nice plays taking hits away from Evans and Gary Thomasson and Trillo nabbed a hard liner off the bat of Derrel Thomas.

The Giants got their first hit when Thomasson rapped a single with two out in the fourth. A DeJesus-to-Buckner double play got Krukow out of trouble again in the fifth.

The Cubs before the game placed Jose Cardenal on the 15-day disabled list while removing pitcher Steve Renko from the injured list.

Blanks Chicago Hornets

Kozel's gem lifts Rebels

Willie Kozel's three-hit shutout performance was the only bright spot of the weekend for the Northwest Rebels semi-pro baseball team, but manager Rick Marino sees better days ahead.

Kozel's 11-strikeout gem Saturday against the Chicago Hornets provided the impetus for a 10-0 victory and was helped along by a pair of homers, one each by Scott Day and Jack Mathias, and two hits by Bruce Eberle. But, in a Sunday doubleheader against the Cragin Merchants, the Rebels' offense sputtered and the pitching fell apart completely.

"I think we're going to put it together eventually," said Marino, whose Rebels are now 3-5 on the young season. "But the pitching we had last year just hasn't come around yet."

THE MERCHANTS capitalized on six Rebel errors in the doubleheader, taking 8-4 and 10-2 wins. In the opener they hit starting pitcher Al Schuette (0-1) for four runs in the first inning and coasted to the victory, although Schuette went the distance and fanned nine batters.

Rebel slugger Dave Lundstedt led his team's six-hit attack with a home run and two RBIs and teammate Tom Good ripped a triple.

In the nightcap, starting pitcher Randy Cordova (0-1) was rocked for six Merchant runs in the second inning, then was charged with four runs in the fifth before Marino came in to slam the door on Cragin the rest of the way.

LUNDSTEDT AND Willie Steinmiller contributed triples to the Rebel cause and Dean Sheridan added an RBI single, but once again it was a case of not enough pitching.

"I think I'm going to have to throw myself into the starting rotation," Marino admitted after his three-inning hitless stint in relief.

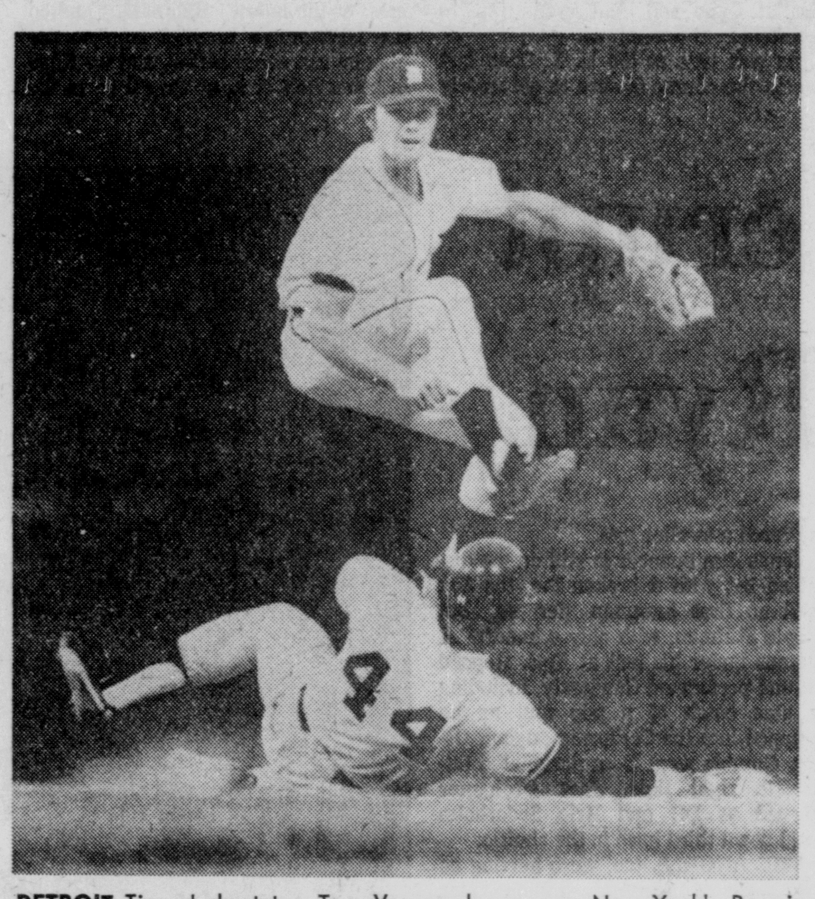

Kozel, the little lefthander, has been sharp, though. He owns all three Rebel victories and has yet to suffer a loss. His ERA is 0.37.

"Willie throws heat," said Marino.

After eight games the Rebels are hitting .336 as a team, led by Eberle's .413 and Day's .379.

THE REBELS RESUME action Saturday with a 12:30 p.m. doubleheader at Rec Park in Arlington Heights against the Horner Park A's. Another twinbill is on the slate for Sunday at Harper College at 12:30 against the Chicago Cardinals.

The Northwest Rebels are sponsored jointly by Jake's Pub of Rolling Meadows, the Ink Spot, American Family Insurance, and John Olsen.

DETROIT Tigers' shortstop Tom Veryzer leaps over New York's Reggie Jackson (44) to complete a double play Tuesday night. The Tigers handed the Yankees their fifth straight loss, 5-2.

Twins stay close with 9-5 victory

From Herald Wire Services

AL baseball

American League RBI leader Larry Hisle had three hits and drove home a run and Rod Carew and Butch Wynegar knocked in two runs apiece Tuesday night to pace a 9-5 victory by the host Minnesota Twins over Texas in what was likely Frank Lucchesi's final game as Rangers' manager.

The victory allowed the Twins to stay only percentage points behind the first-place White Sox in the American League West Division.

Reports throughout the day indicated strongly that Lucchesi would be fired by the Rangers and replaced by Eddie Stanky.

The Twins victimized losing starter Doyle Alexander, 6-4, and reliever Mike Marshall for five runs in the fourth inning to take a 6-3 lead. Rich Chiles opened the inning with a double and scored on Roy Smalley's single.

AT BALTIMORE, Luis Tiant fired a two-hitter while George Scott and Jim Rice, Boston's 1-2 home run punch, blasted their 19th and 17th respectively in the fourth inning to power a 7-0 victory by the Red Sox over the Orioles.

Tiant, 5-5, struck out five and walked three. He did not allow a batter to reach third base as he extended Baltimore's scoreless inning streak to 23.

Lee May's infield single in the fourth inning and Pat Kelly's two-out double in the ninth were the only hits for Baltimore.

AT KANSAS CITY, Hal McRae collected three hits, knocked in four runs and scored two others to give the Royals a 13-3 victory over the Seattle Mariners behind the combined four-hit pitching of Jim Colborn and Marty Pattin.

George Brett and Tom Poquette also had three hits apiece with Brett knocking in three runs and Poquette scoring three times. The Royals batted around in both the third and fifth innings.

IN DETROIT, Mickey Stanley and Tito Fuentes each hit two-run homers to give the Tigers a 5-2 victory over New York and hand the Yankees their fifth straight loss.

Jim Crawford came on in the third inning when rookie starter Dave Rozema developed a sore right shoulder and picked up his second American League victory for seven innings of seven-hit, eight-strikeout relief.

Crawford, 1-1 this season after going only 1-8 in his first season with Detroit, gave up a run in the third inning the Yankees added a run in the ninth.

IN TORONTO, Paul Dade scored twice and drove home a run and reliever Rick Waits, in a rare starting assignment, hurled shutout ball for 6 2-3 innings before giving way to a pair of relievers to lead a 4-0 victory by the Cleveland Indians over the Blue Jays.

Dade singled in the fifth and scored on a double by Jim Norris, and walked in the seventh before being driven in on Rico Carty's double. Dade's sacrifice fly drove in Ron Pruitt for the fourth Cleveland run in the eighth.

IN MILWAUKEE, Don Money singled twice during an eight-run fourth inning which carried the Brewers to a 12-1 rout of the Oakland A's behind the five-hit pitching of Jim Slaton.

Milwaukee sent 13 batters to the plate in the fourth against three Oakland pitchers and collected six hits and three walks. Von Joshua's two-run single was the key blow of the uprising.

Foster's 19th homer paces Reds to 10-5 win over Phils

From Herald Wire Services

NL baseball

George Foster drove in four runs with a three-run homer and a single and Johnny Bench added a two-run shot as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Phillies 10-5 Tuesday night at Philadelphia.

Cincinnati broke a 4-4 tie with three-run innings in the fifth and sixth. Bench scored the first run in the fifth on a fielder's choice and the last two scored when second baseman Ted Sizemore made a throwing error on an attempted double play. Foster's 19th home run came with Ken Griffey and Joe Morgan aboard in the sixth.

Both teams scored freely in the early innings. Foster singled home Griffey in the first, Bench hit his 13th homer with Morgan on in the second and rookie pitcher Paul Moskau hit a solo homer in the fourth for the early Reds' runs.

The Phillies scored in the second on Bob Boone's third homer, added another in the third on a sacrifice fly by Mike Schmidt and tied the score in the fourth when Sizemore singled home one run and pinch-hitter Tim McCarver's sacrifice fly brought in the other.

AT MONTREAL, Steve Rogers tossed a four-hitter for his ninth victory and battery-mate Gary Carter continued his torrid hitting with four hits and two RBI to lead the Expos to a 6-0 triumph over the Houston Astros.

Rogers, who has lost five times, notched his third shutout and league-leading 10th complete game in besting Ken Forsch. Rogers also struck out three to take over the league lead with 99 strikeouts.

Carter, who has hit safely his last seven trips to the plate and has nine RBI in his last 10 at-bats, singled home Ellis Valentine, who had doubled, in the seventh and also singled home a run during a four-run eighth inning.

Forsch, 4-5, gave up Montreal's first run in the fourth inning when Chris Speier doubled, went to third base on a passed ball by Joe Ferguson and scored on Warren Cromartie's groundout.

IN NEW YORK, rookie Steve Henderson delivered a three-run homer — his first in the major leagues — with one out in the bottom of the 11th inning to send the Mets to a 5-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Henderson, obtained from Cincinnati with two others in last week's trade for Tom Seaver, belted an 0-1 pitch off rookie losing reliever Don Collins, 1-5, after John Stearns had doubled and Felix Millan had drawn an intentional walk.

Henderson had just come into the game in the top of the 11th as a defensive replacement for left-fielder Ed Kranepool. Rick Baldwin, the third Met hurler, pitched two innings to win his first game without a loss this season.

Area soccer group has openings

The Celtic Soccer Club has fall openings in its senior division. This division has eight teams of boys born in 1963 and 1964.

Games are played weekly, generally on Sundays, and the season will begin Labor Day weekend with a Canadian tournament and continue on a house league basis through October.

The cost is $5 which will cover a uniform shirt, patches, and a trophy.

Eligible boys (those born in '63 and '64) who would like to play in the Celtic program should contact Bill Privett at 991-2329.

YOUNG JOCKEY Steve Cauthen works out on a horse from the Whitley stable Tuesday at Belmont Park. Cauthen, injured a month ago in a three-horse spill, is listed to ride seven mounts Thursday.

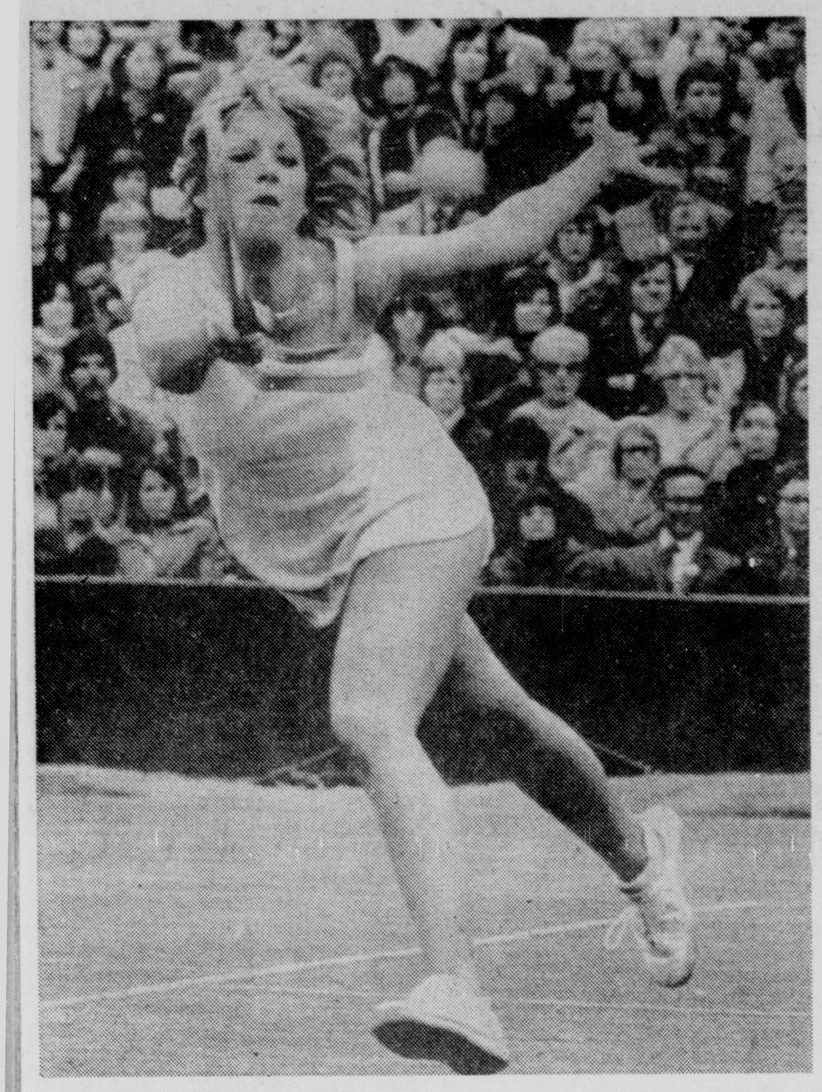

Seven races for Cauthen on first day

NEW YORK (UPI) — Steve Cauthen, with just a few traces of the accident that left him covered in bandages last month, is listed to ride in seven races on his first day back at racing Thursday at Belmont Park.

Cauthen, the 17-year-old jockey sensation who has been out since being injured in a three-horse spill May 23, is scheduled to ride in the first three races on Belmont's nine-race card, has two mounts listed for the fifth and is posted to ride in the seventh, eighth and ninth races.

In the $25,000 allowance feature on the turf, Cauthen is scheduled to ride Capulets Song.

Cauthen was only expected to have four mounts in his first day back, according to his manager Lennie Goodman, but apparently the demand for his services forced him to accept more races.

EASY DOES IT. Chris Evert returns a shot against Ruta Gerulaitis Tuesday in match at Wimbledon. Chris began her defense of the women's singles title with a methodical 6-0, 6-3 romp.

Boos fail to halt Connors

WIMBLEDON (UPI) — Jimmy Connors, shrugging off the unprecedented boos and hisses of a normally staid center court crowd, Tuesday defeated Briton Richard Lewis, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4, in his opening match of the $373,440 Wimbledon centennial championships.

The Royal box was pointedly empty when Connors took to the center court, and the crowd of 15,000 began booing, hissing and catcalling in a display of displeasure never before given a former champion.

The reason was Connors' decision Monday not to attend the opening parade of past champions and not to collect his commemorative medal, an action which the British press called a snub to the Duke of Kent, who was handing them out.

BUT CONNORS' career is a record of thriving on adversity and he has often appeared at his best when battling the establishment, be it American or British.

"I expected the reception I got," said Connors afterwards. "It made me play better."

The top seed and 9-4 favorite was seldom tested by the left-hander who looks a little like Stan Smith but has none of the Californian's armory of shots. Connors played with his right thumb bandaged in a small steel splint but the injury didn't affect his game.

"I can't come all the way around with my swing," he said. "Perhaps it even helps my game."

THE SECOND DAY'S play was evenly balanced between men's and women's first round singles. The only upset was not really even that. Harold Solomon, the 16th and last seed, was dumped by fellow American Steve Docherty, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5, 7-5.

Somomin's baseline game, all-powerful on slow courts, was hopelessly at sea on Wimbledon's fast grass and critics who were surprised that Solomon should be seeded at all were justified.

Docherty, of Portland, Ore., used his booming first serve and good volleying to the maximum, leaving Solomon no time for passing shots, and the Silver Springs, Md., player was soon showing his frustration by throwing his racket at the back fence and slugging balls into the next court.

DEFENDING CHAMPION Chris Evert was in a calmer mood in center court, demolishing fellow American Ruta Gerulaitis, her first round opponent, 6-0, 6-3, with her usual cool approach.

Her tennis varied from the baseline and her drop shots frequently caught the New Yorker flat-footed. She disposed of the first set in just 18 minutes and when Gerulaitis finally won a game, she received an ovation from the crowd for the feat.

On the next-door court, Martina Navratilova, the player seeded to meet Evert in the final, was giving a much less convincing display against Briton Glynis Coles. The score of 6-3, 6-0 was almost the same but the Czech-born player was horribly out of touch and was lucky to meet somebody in worse form than herself.

ROSIE CASALS, the sixth seed, downed Tanya Harford of South Africa, 6-3, 6-1, while both Billie Jean King and 14-year-old Tracy Austin received first round byes.

Twelfth-seeded Kathy May, the other U.S. seed in action, recovered from 0-3 in her first appearance on center court to defeat Britain's Linda Mottram, 6-3, 6-1.

In other women's matches involving Americans, Janet Newberry downed Raquel Giscafre of Argentina, 6-4, 6-2, Julie Anthony stopped Naoko Sato of Japan, 6-1, 6-3, and Jo'Ann Russell ousted Briton Sue Mappin, 8-6, 6-2.

In men's opening round clashes, Tim Gullikson succeeded where his left-handed twin brother had failed Monday, reaching the second round with a 6-2, 6-4, 6-3 win over fellow American Steve Krulevitz.

OTHER AMERICAN wins went to John McEnroe, who sidelined Ismail El Shafei of Egypt, 6-0, 7-5, 6-4, and veteran Dennis Ralston, finalist here 11 years ago, who disposed of Trey Walkte, St. Louis, Mo., 5-7, 6-4, 6-2, 9-8.

But the big serve and volley game of Australian Phil Dent was too much for Bill Logfren, 6-1, 6-2, 6-2, and seventh seed Raul Ramirez of Mexico outlasted Peter Fleming, Chatham, N.J., 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, 6-3.

Another day of temperatures in the 50s and north winds kept the attendance down to 25,000.

Czosnyka sharp in Lion win

by VIC NOVAK

Tuesday night's American Legion baseball game between Schaumburg-Hoffman Estates and Logan Square seemed more like David vs. Goliath. Only this time, David lost.

The final results from the St. Viator High School field showed Logan Square conquering Schaumburg, 2-0.

Schaumburg coach Tony Stompanato could be excused for thinking it was not his day. Only 11 of his 17 players showed up. Four of the 17 were playing for the Fremd High School Summer League team.

STOMPANATO'S starting lineup included only two players over 16 years of age. Four starters were playing out of position.

In contrast was Logan Square. The Lions fielded a veteran team of an 11-player bench against the first-year Schaumburg squad.

To Schaumburg, Logan Square pitcher Phil Czosnyka probably resembled Goliath. The 6-0 righthander was breezing along with a no-hitter until the seventh inning. Then, leadoff batter Glen Daniel ripped a clean single to left field off a high fastball.

WORKING WITH only a 2-0 lead, Czosnyka induced the next batter, Bill Friskics, to hit into a pitcher - shortstop - first base double play.

The young Schaumburg team did not give up, however. Larry Dahl boomed a triple to deep center field and Rob Totton drew a walk, putting the tying runs on base. Those runners never went any farther, because Dan McSweeney lined out to Lion second baseman Mike Ledna for the final out.

Logan Square's runs displayed Schaumburg's inexperience. Schaumburg starter Bill Schimbke deserved a better fate as a leaky defense doomed him each time.

In the bottom of the first inning, Logan Square's Jim Eaton tripled over leftfielder Kerry Field and crossed home plate when shortstop Totton's relay throw sailed over catcher McSweeney's head.

FIVE INNINGS later, another Schaumburg error created the Lions' second and final run. With two outs, Lion Jim Passolt drew a walk. Teammate Rick Heredia then singled and Passolt scored when rightfielder Bob Bain's wild throw flew past third baseman Daniels.

Czosnyka struck out three and walked one while Schimbke fanned four and yielded one walk also.

Bowling openings in Paddock league

How public transportation helps people who can't, don't, or won't use public transportation.

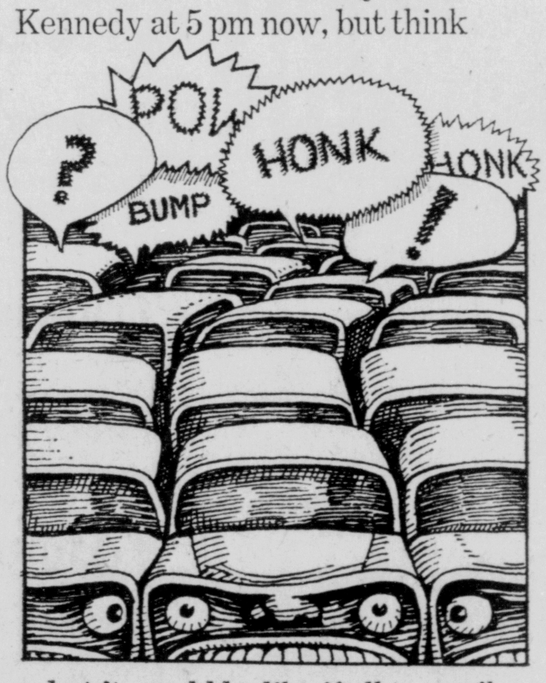

There are lots of people who don't take a bus, rapid transit, or commuter train.

And they receive some important benefits of public transportation, anyway.

Room on the road, sort of.

Because so many people do use public transportation, there is room on the streets and highways for those who do drive. And there's usually a place to park.

You may not feel that there's much room on the Dan Ryan or Kennedy at 5 pm now, but think what it would be like if all two million public transportation riders decided to start driving to work.

It's been estimated that the first six floors of every major commercial building in the region would be needed just for parking space!

Your house is probably worth more.

There's no question that a bus, rapid transit or commuter line enhances property values.

If you're fortunate enough to have public transportation near your house, you can travel quickly and economically.

You can probably sell your house a lot easier and for considerably more money, too.

(Sometime, take a look at the apartment and house ads. Note how many include "near public transportation" as a selling point.)

The RTA was established to co-ordinate public transportation services, stabilize fares, and find ways to improve and expand public transportation in the region.

While we've been hard at work at that task, we've also prepared a package of useful information about public transportation, which we'll be happy to send you, free.

Just complete the coupon below and send it to us.

Even if you always drive, send for the package.

If your car ever breaks down, we'll show you how to get home.

Ex-manager Stanky may get Texas post

Eddie Stanky, one-time controversial "brat" of the Brooklyn Dodgers and manager of the White Sox, was almost certain to be named the new manager of the Texas Rangers sometime today.

Frank Lucchesi managed the Rangers against the Minnesota Twins in Bloomington, Minn., Tuesday night, but a Ranger source said that they will hold a press conference in the near future. It was understood that Stanky was flying from Mobile, Ala., to Minneapolis to work out the final details of the contract.

Stanky, 60, who last managed in the majors in 1968, confirmed that he was negotiating with Ranger officials to take over the club. "We're in the negotiating stage, but we are close to a contract," he said. ' We are close to finalizing it."

Stanky, who managed the St. Louis Cardinals from 1952 through 1955 and the Sox from 1966 through 1968, is the current baseball coach at South Alabama. He left there Tuesday apparently to think about an offer made by vice president Eddie Robinson and General Manager Danny O'Brien.

Lucchesi said he didn't know anything about the situation but added, "not only in my situation but for any manager to be three games out of first place and to be put on the firing line is certainly a strange thing."

Ford plays golf round with Nicklaus

DENVER — Former President Ford played a charity round of golf with Jack Nicklaus Tuesday at a suburban country club and tried to correct a slice before dining with ex-Secretary of State Henry Kissinger at the home of an oilman.

The Ford-Kissinger dinner was arranged by Marvin Davis, chairman of the Metro National Bank in Denver and head of the Davis Oil Co. A spokesman for Davis said the dinner was private and neither Ford nor Kissinger would speak to reporters.

Ford teamed with Nicklaus to play an Easter Seal round of golf at the Columbine Country Club. Sportscaster Bud Palmer, part owner of the National Hockey League's Colorado Rockies, formed a second twosome with the club pro. Ford was applauded by reporters when he strolled into a Nicklaus news conference and said he warmed up for the round by hitting practice shots. "When he (Ford) is hitting the ball from right to left . . . he can really drive the ball quite a ways," said Nicklaus before the former president appeared.

Officials tell of fake U.S. Open tickets

TULSA — About 200 persons who thought they had purchased tickets to attend the U.S. Open were turned away at the Southern Hills Country Club gate because the tickets were fake, authorities said Tuesday.

William A. Grant, finance chairman for the golf tournament held last week, said security police and gate attendants were alert to the bogus passes and confiscated "less than 200" of them.

A police spokesman said some of the persons who had purchased the tickets found the men selling the tickets and successfully demanded their money back. But many others apparently lost their money.

Grant said ticket personnel began screening the passes after some off-center printing was noted on one pass. He added that a similar phony ticket ring operated two years ago when the U.S. Open was played at Chicago.

Red Sox pick up Helms, drop Griffin

BALTIMORE — The Boston Red Sox Tuesday picked up veteran infielder Tommy Helms, who had been given his unconditional release by the Pittsburgh Pirates, and placed veteran second baseman Doug Griffin on waivers for the purpose of giving him his unconditional release.

Griffin cleared American League waivers Tuesday afternoon, team spokesmen said. If Griffin does not clear National League waivers next Monday, he'll be a free agent.

Helms, 36, a .269 lifetime hitter, has been in the major leagues from 1964 to 1977. He appeared in 15 games for Pittsburgh this year, went to bat 12 times and had no hits.

Goes 'home' to lick his wounds

Bartow was misplaced at UCLA

Loren Tate

Grandpa Walter Alston operated with an introspective, slow-paced style that seemed out of place amid the glamor of Los Angeles. Yet only two men in baseball history, Connie Mack and John McGraw, managed one club longer than Alston directed the Dodgers (23 years).

John Wooden was a native Hoosier whose calm, stately appearance disguised the inner toughness of the man. As the college game's most successful coach at UCLA, he cradled the difficult LA media in the palm of his hand.

So Gene Bartow's Missouri drawl wasn't really a detriment. But somehow Gene never quite fit into a Jim Murray column. Carrying his emotions on his sleeve, and overreacting to rampant criticism, he was as misplaced as Wooden's successor as a donkey-drawn cart on the Santa Monica Freeway.

Thus it comes as no real surprise that Bartow concluded three years under the mast — one at Illinois and two at UCLA — by medicating his wounds back there in the safer southern environment from which he came.

IT WAS A CASE of beating the bullet. UCLA athletic director J. D. Morgan, who made the critical mistake of hiring one with such tender sensibilities, was being forced to the wall. A weak recruiting year and the departure of key varsitymen, two of whom have indicated they will transfer, put the handwriting on the wall.

UCLA fans are not satisfied with mere conference champions in basketball. Bartow's teams showed a noticeable lack of fundamental training — he teaches free-lance offense and what appears to be free-lance defense — and his relationship with the LA media was a disaster. Never before has so successful a coach been subjected to such ridicule.

Bartow's failure in that situation stems in great part from his own home-spun philosophy that the populace and press exist to support the coach's every desire.

That is, you see, the case in university communities within Southeastern and Atlantic Coast Conference boundaries.

HE HAD BEEN disappointed on both counts at Illinois, and complained bitterly about it. Crowds were poor during his brief tenure in Champaign-Urbana, and he was doubly offended when comments he made over the airwaves — radio and TV — found their way into the newspapers.

"What I said on my shows in Memphis was never picked up and printed," he fumed. "They (the sports writers) wanted a winning program in Memphis and they were careful about printing things that hurt it."

Our only response at the time was: "If you don't say it, we won't print it."

That philosophy had no chance in Los Angeles. When Bartow stalked off Bud Furillo's call-in show recently, it was clear he had reached the cliff's edge.

GENE WILL BE much happier building the basketball program for the University of Alabama in Birmingham. He will, first of all, be guaranteed at least a three-year honeymoon with the fans there. The newspapers can hardly be quick to criticize where they have not even had a team before.

And Gene's biggest asset is the fact that Birmingham is a basketball hotbed turning out several major college players every year. He can do much of his recruiting at home, and will spend an entire year getting ready. With just a few good junior college veterans and good in-city recruiting of the better preps, he should soon create a solid basketball program there.

It is a city which, from all signs, is ready to support major college basketball.

THERE ARE THOSE who say already that Bartow has made a mistake in promising quick success. But that is a natural comment at this stage, and one that will be erased by the long months leading up to Birmingham's first game in 1978.

Bartow will become a highly popular guy in the meantime because he won't have lost a single game in 1977-78. That'll provide time for the scars of the last three years, and especially the last two, to heal. It is a regrouping stage that Gene very much needs.

Why do we love baseball?

Commentary

by POHLA SMITH

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Ever wonder why baseball became America's summer pastime?

I know I never bothered to think about baseball's appeal until I tried recently to explain the game to Mohamed A. Sallam, the Yemeni ambassador to the United Nations, who watched part of a game between the Pirates and San Diego during a visit by 91 U.N. ambassadors to Pittsburgh.

Then, as I tried to see the game through Sallam's eyes, it became apparent that America's enduring love affair with baseball must seem very strange to outsiders.

HE SAID, for example, "I think it is very good that so many people would get together to see baseball, instead of seeing a movie or something, where it is so much easier to be entertained."

It took awhile for his comments to sink in.

But upon reflection, I decided he was right. While other popular sports such as football, basketball and ice hockey have much in common with traditional American cultural characteristics, baseball does not.

Those other sports include continuous action, much like the frenetic lifestyle of Americans who find it impossible to sit patiently through the Europeans' traditional three-hour dinner or Latin Americans' afternoon siesta. Baseball involves long, often boring, minutes of inactivity while pitchers ponder the plate or batters foul off ball after ball.

THE LIMB-RISKING endeavors of a running back or a forward plowing through the crowd for a reverse dunk shot are in tune with Americans' so-called frontier spirit. But it is possible to sit through three hours of baseball and see players do nothing more exerting than trot 90 feet to first base. It is no wonder that shortly after I told Sallam how much money baseball players make he asked me, "do not baseball players exercise like players in football?"

And it must seem strange to foreign visitors that in America, where even 10-year-olds have pocket calculators to help with their homework, individual successes in baseball are measured by means of intricate mathematical formulas. Sallam could only shake his head in wonderment when I tried to explain such terms as ERA's, RBI's and slugging percentages.

"It is very complicated," Sallam repeated many times as I tried to teach him baseball's rules.

But the complex rules and statistics, the occasional boredom are the very appeal of baseball; they are what makes the game such a pleasant diversion from everyday life.

THE LAPSES of time between cheer-producing plays encourage communication among family members, friends or lovers as no other sport, films or concerts can. Boyfriends teach girlfriends how to keep score in the same way their fathers taught them. Little League coaches point out to their young charges the distinctions between screwball and knuckler. Big brothers win admiration from younger siblings by spouting the rich lexicon of the game: Texas leagues, bloopers, bleeders.

And baseball's preoccupation with statistics appeals to the academician and the steelworker alike. Computer experts can try to project when Dave Parker will hit his 100th major league home run. Aging fans can use record books to back barroom arguments about whether today's hig-priced superstars meet the standards of the Babe Ruths and Lou Gehrigs. Parlor baseball games can be devised by composing teams based on the lifetime averages of former players.

And baseball's moments of boredom are a welcome relief. One dare not take his eyes off a football game or hockey match: something could easily be missed. But should your attention wander in baseball, the crack of a bat gives you enough warning to tune in and see a double or a great catch.

AND WHAT could be more enjoyable than sitting under a starry sky in shirtsleeves, drinking beer, munching popcorn, pausing occasionally between daydreams to cheer a great play or a home run?

Certainly not shivering through a football game played in a snowstorm or sweating through a basektball game in a crowded gym while you yell for people to get down in front.

Take me out to the baseball game.

Obedience keeps old dogs on top in competition

Dave Terrill

Just dogs

The competitive life of a show dog is relatively short, with few "middle-aged" dogs of six or more years of age actually setting foot into the show ring.

In the obedience ring, however, age means little to a dog. The 1976 United States Obedience Classic, for example, was won by a 10-year-old Doberman Pinscher, Our Own Dark Secret, U.D.

The makers of Gaines Dog Foods, who sponsor the Classic, were also surprised to learn that an 11½-year-old dog had competed in the Western Regional competition leading to the 1977 United States Dog Obedience Classic held in St. Louis, during March of this year.

THIS 11½-YEAR-OLD dog was a Poodle owned and handled by an exhibitor from Burbank, Calif. Although the dog did not make it through the Regional competition, the owner still planned to enter the Classic in March, for which it was eligible. In this case, as well as many others, it was not the final score that is of interest here, but the fact that older dogs are still able to compete in the obedience ring.

It's true that when a dog gets up in years he may not be able to go over the jumps as well as he used to, but the point remains, he is still competing and enjoys it.

Northwest obedience trial —

Writing about obedience dogs brings to mind that the Northwest Obedience Club will hold its annual obedience trial Saturday, at Harper College, Roselle and Algonquin Rds., Palatine.

This will be an outdoor trial with hours from 8:30 a.m.to 9 p.m. Judging will start at 9 a.m. If you want information about the event, contact the trial secretary, Joan Groneman, 359-5880.

Obest pets —

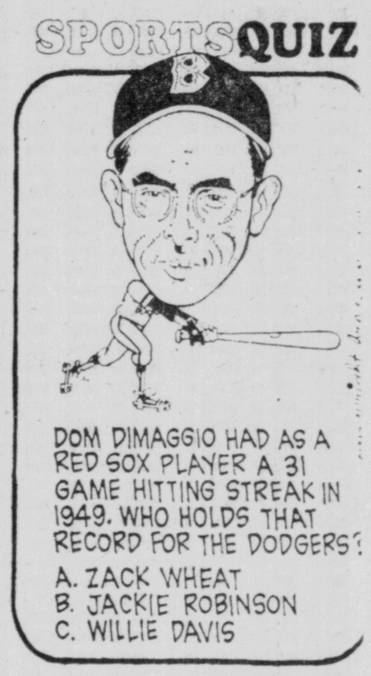

This had been a severe winter, to say the least. With it went a restriction on the outdoor activity of our dogs. Such confinement can lead to obesity, or just plain overweight problems.

Now is a good time to really check and see if your dog put on too much weight during the winter months. If the dog appears to have gained weight and your checks on the scales shows it to be true, you would be wise to reduce the diet for awhile.

Humans know that it is much harder to lose weight than to gain it. As a dog owner, you have to take charge before it becomes a problem.

Barks and Bays —

Tests have been made to prove that the color of a dog house does have a bearing on the inside temperature. In all cases, the house painted white was cooler.

Conant track meets begin

The Hoffman Estates Park Dist. and the Hoffman Striders Track Club will be the co-sponsors of six weekly open track meets at Conant High School, starting Thursday night at 6:00.

The meets, held every summer, have in the past attracted top competition from the area's track ranks, prep and older. In addition, age divisions are also set up for children, middle-agers and seniors.

A 75 cent fee enables an athlete to compete in two events. Registration for the meet will be at 5:15 p.m. on the day of each meet. Ribbons will be awarded to every entrant who competes seriously and finishes the event.

CONANT'S TRACK is an all-weather surface that can accommodate ¼-inch spikes. Field-event competitors should furnish their own implements.

Events scheduled for the first meet include 120 high hurdles for boys, 110 low hurdles for girls, high jump, long jump, pole vault, shot put, discus, mile run, 440, two-mile, 50 and 100. On other nights, the events will include 330 lows for boys, the 880, the 220 and the triple jump.

Except for the hurdles, all events will be divided into girls and boys races.

Other dates for the meets are June 30 and July 7, 14 and 21.

Win at bridge

Percentages turn on spades

A quick count of losers tells South that he must lose two spades and a diamond. There is also a possible club loser which can be eliminated in one of two ways. One is for South to set up his jack of spades for a club discard from dummy; the other to get a club discard from his own hand on dummy's fourth diamond.

Both plays will almost surely require a 3-2 trump break so South wins the diamond in dummy and draws three rounds of trumps. Then he can duck a diamond with a 36 per cent chance of success. Suits break 3-3 36 per cent of the time, or he can go after spades.

The chance here is far better. He can win the third trump in his hand and lead a spade toward dummy. If West holds both ace and king he can't do anything about South setting up his jack, but West plays low and East is in with the king.

Now South gets a dummy with the second diamond, leads a spade, finesses the nine and is home when West has to win with the ace. Almost a 75 per cent play as against a 36 per cent one.

Ask Andy

Armadillo's life sometimes one small ball

Andy sends the Encyclopaedia Britannica's 1977 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Marilyn Bevard, 11, of Mounds, Okla., for her question:

WHAT DO ARMADILLOS EAT?

Early Spanish explorers to the Americas found a strange, small animal with a body covered by hard and tough bony plates. They named the creature armadillo, a word that meant little armored thing. And what a good name it turned out to be since that is exactly the best way to describe the mammal who has his own built-in suit of armor.

You'll find the armadillo from Argentina in South America all the way north to Louisiana and Texas and from the Southwestern part of the United States on east to the Atlantic Ocean.

The armadillo has strong claws which he uses in part in his search for food. He can burrow and tunnel easily. His diet features insects, earthworms, spiders and snails, and with his long, narrow tongue, he can easily lick up insects as he digs. He has very small teeth which are located far back in his mouth, so the teeth are used strictly for eating and never in self-defense.

Protection comes from a shell that is made of bony plates fitted closely together. The armor is stiff and hard but is flexible across the back. One type of armadillo can curl himself into a hard, tight ball of bony shell with his feet and head tucked inside. Other animals find it is almost impossible for them to grip the ball-shaped armadillo with their teeth or claws.

Actually, the armadillo will only hide within his own case as a final emergency gesture. When bothered, he will usually hurry to his own burrow. If home isn't just around the corner when he receives a danger sign, he will use his excellent digging claws and quickly carve out a hole in the ground for himself.

The only type of armadillo living in the United States is called the nine-banded armadillo. He has hinges on his shell consisting of nine narrow bands of shell-like armor which slide one on top of another. This insect-eater is about two feet long from the end of his rather pointed nose to the end of a bony tail, and he weighs about 15 pounds.

Mother armadillos usually give birth to four babies at one time, and they are always of the same sex.

Armadillos found south of the United States have three or six bands across their backs, instead of nine as found on those living north of the Mexican border.

Although not too many people elect to use the armadillo for food, its flesh is good to eat and is a favorite item for the dinner menu of natives in selected areas.

Andy sends a Denoyer-Geppert World Globe to Shaun McDaniel, 13, of Effington, S.C., for his question:

WHAT CAUSES PEOPLE TO SNORE?

Rasping sounds can come out of a sleeping person's throat. They are caused by a fluttering of the soft palate and the two strips of tissue at the throat's entrance as the sleeping person breathes through his open mouth. Older people snore more frequently than youngsters because they often lose the firmness and elasticity in the soft palate and tongue, making the vibration possible.

One is more likely to snore if he is lying on his back because the tongue and soft tissues tend to drop toward the back of the throat. The sound can usually be stopped if the sleeping person turns onto his side.

Nose obstructions can also cause a snoring-type sound. Children with enlarged adenoids sometimes fall into this snoring group.

Do you have a question to Ask Andy? Send it on a post card with your name, age and complete address to Ask Andy in care of The Herald, P.O. Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006. Entries are open to girls and boys 7 to 17.

Ban on saccharin use blocked for a year

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House voted Tuesday to block for at least one year the Food and Drug Administration's proposed ban on saccharin.

Rejecting arguments that the move was unwise because of new evidence linking the artificial sweetener with cancer, the House approved by standing vote an amendment that would prohibit the FDA from using federal money to promulgate or enforce the ban through Sept. 30, 1978.

The provision was attached to a measure carrying $12.7 billion to fund the Agriculture Dept. and related agencies for the new fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

The House then approved the overall bill, 380 to 35, and sent it to the Senate.

THE AMENDMENT WAS sponsored by Reps. Harold Volkmer, D-Mo., and Jamie Whitten, D-Miss.

FDA stirred a storm of criticism in proposing to outlaw use of saccharin in the manufacture of foods and beverages on the basis of Canadian tests showing the substance produced cancer in rats.

The agency had closed out its period for public comment on June 14 and had hoped to put the ban into effect by late August.

But new scientific evidence surfaced during the weekend showing saccharin caused bladder cancer in human males, so the FDA reopened the comment period for an additional two months.

Thus the ban probably could not go into effect before September.

WHITTEN ACKNOWLEDGED the FDA still could rush the ban through before the beginning of the new fiscal year on Oct. 1. but said such action was unlikely because it would clearly contradict the intent of Congress.

Proponents of the amendment argued the Canadian tests were not sufficient to prompt a ban because such large concentrations of the sweetener were used. But opponents said the new evidence of a human cancer risk made the Volkmer-Whitten move "a serious mistake."

Rep. Paul Rogers, D-Fla., urged the House to wait until his health subcommittee could have hearings on a bill ordering an 18-month delay in the saccharin ban, including the new evidence of human cancer.

"We don't want the House members in a position of sticking their necks out before they know what's going on," Rogers said.

Rep. L. H. Fountain, D-N. C., said he understood why some lawmakers would vote for the amendment "from a purely political point of view" because of pressure "from their saccharin-loving constituents."

"But it would be a serious mistake if we say to the FDA we in the Congress are the scientists of this country, and we're simply going to reverse you on a political vote," Fountain argued.

THE BILL ALSO includes $1 million for further tests on saccharin's cancer-causing potential with a mandate that the FDA use dosage levels closer to the actual amount likely to be consumed by humans.

Whitten said if definite proof is found in the next year that saccharin causes cancer in humans, Congress could rescind its action and allow the ban to go into effect.

Up until the FDA announced plans to ban it, saccharin was the only artificial sweetener that could be used legally in diet foods and beverages. Under the FDA proposal, persons such as diabetics who must control their sugar intake still would be able to buy saccharin at drug stores.

Medicine's link to cancer studied

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration said Tuesday a high-priority study is being made to determine if a widely used ingredient in sleep aids, cough and cold remedies and other medicines is a cause of cancer.

FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy said his agency was not going to "rush to judgment" on the issue but is "extremely interested" in a study claiming to show the ingredient, methapyrilene, caused liver tumors in test animals.

Methapyrilene is an antihistamine and one of the most common ingredients in many nonprescription medicines. Among sleep aids alone, for instance, it is found in Compoz, Miles Nervine, Nytol, Quiet World, Relax-U-Caps, Sleep-Eze Tablets and Sominex.

THE WIDEST USE, however, is in cough and cold remedies.

Dr. William Lijinsky, director of the chemical carcinogenisis program at the Federick Cancer Research Center, told a Senate small business subcommittee last week the ingredient, when combined in the stomach with nitrates and nitrites, can produce nitrosamines — known cancer causers.

Nitrites are preservatives used for bacon and other cured meats but the human system also can absorb them naturally from vegetables.

Kennedy told the same subcommittee Tuesday there is reason to believe nitrosamines may not be the culprit in Lijinsky's tests and "it may be probable that methapyrilene itself is causing all or part of the effects."

HE SAID THE National Cancer Institute has promised high-priority testing for the ingredient and "the problem is being studied as intensively as possible."

Kennedy also told the subcommittee his agency will propose a ban on certain sedatives, primarily Compoz and Quiet World, if they are promoted for daytime use.

At one time many sedatives were billed in advertising on their labels as being for use during the day. That approach has ebbed, however, in the 18 months since a panel of scientists formed by the FDA raised questions about daytime use.

While the products themselves may remain on the market for other than daytime medication, Kennedy said the FDA wants to end promotion for that use because persons taking them run the risk of becoming drowsy during the day when they may be operating cars or other machinery.

"Given this risk and the absence of any demonstrated medical benefit, there seems to be no justification for the continued marketing of these products," Kennedy said.

Alaskan crude oil just keeps oozing along

PRUDHOE BAY, Alaska (UPI) — Hot and heavy crude oil from Alaska's North Slope flowed slowly southward Tuesday in Alyeska's 800-mile pipeline.

It took about 20 hours for the oil to advance the first 15 miles, oozing along at about .75 miles per hour. Late Monday a booster pump was put into operation to increase the pace.

Engineers figured the flow would average out to 1.1 miles per hour in the early going and be stepped up to between 4 and 5 m.p.h. after the pipeline had been thoroughly tested and the flow increased to capacity.

As the oil moved, it pushed ahead through the 48-inch diameter steel tube an eight-foot metal and plastic "pig" equipped with a device to clang against the pipe's interior, telling technicians walking along how the flow was advancing.

The first flow was being inspected every inch of the way and was to reach the southern terminal of the line at Valdez in about 30 days.

Elgin Academy sets admission test day

The Elgin Academy, an independent preparatory boarding and day school, will offer its third admission testing day at 8:30 a.m. Saturday in Edwards Hall on the campus, 350 Park St., Elgin.

Headmaster Frank Hogan said some grade levels now are filled to capacity but waiting lists are being compiled for those grades.

The Elgin Academy was founded in 1839 and is nonsectarian and coeducational, admitting students in grades six through 12. The school offers a college preparatory curriculum. Average class size is 12 students and door-to-door bus service is available. For further information, call 695-0300.

McKay receives Boynton award

Elizabeth McKay, director of environmental health at Harper College, has received the Ruth E. Boynton award for her contributions to the development of the American College Health Assn. The presentation was made at the association's 55th annual meeting in Philadelphia recently.

McKay has been an important figure in developing innovative approaches to the health needs of the community college and is considered a leader among those pioneering in such programs.

A resident of Arlington Heights, she has been associated with Harper College for more than seven years.

Senior volunteer joins Hall of Fame

Clearbrook Center's senior volunteer, Douglas Bryden, has been selected a member of the City of Chicago's Senior Citizen Hall of Fame Class of 1977.

Clearbrook Center is a school in Rolling Meadows for the handicapped.

Doug has volunteered at Clearbrook's Vocational Rehabilitation Center since 1970, and consistently has devoted two days per week to working with the clients enrolled in the workshop. He has developed tutoring programs for high school equivalency certificates and driver's education.
